

BRITISH SEIZE MIGHTY FRENCH FLEET; CHURCHILL WEEPS AS HE TELLS OF BATTLE

Flame-Throwing Bomb Kills Two at World Fair

Device Found In Threatened British Pavilion

5 Other Officers Hurt; Explosion Frightens Crowd of 168,000.

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, July 4.—A flame-throwing bomb, disguised as a portable radio, killed two detectives today and injured five others—two critically—after they had rushed it from its hiding place in the British pavilion at the New York World's Fair.

The blast tore a hole five feet wide and four feet deep in the ground of a little-used plot, smashed two huge glass windows in the dining salon of the Polish pavilion, 150 yards away, and ripped the clothing from the bodies of its mangled victims.

Fear Spreads.
The explosion shook the lower end of the foreign section and sent tremors of fear through the Independence Day crowd of more than 168,000 visitors.

The bomb—police said it was a time-device—spread destruction only two days after a mysterious voice in a telephone call Tuesday had ordered the pavilion switchboard operator to "get out of the building, we're going to blow it up."

Killed in the blast were Detectives Joseph J. Lynch, of the Bronx, and Ferdinand Socha, of Brooklyn. In critical condition were Detectives William J. Federer, 26, of Queens, and Joseph Gallagher, of Brooklyn.

Hit by Splinter.
Lieutenant John McLaughlin, of the World's Fair police, standing 35 feet away when the bomb exploded, was struck by a splinter and received superficial lacerations.

He was talking at the time to Commissioner John Sullivan, of the World's Fair police, who escaped injury.

The entire available bomb squad of the police department rushed to the fair.

Recent Explosions.
Only two weeks ago bombs exploded in a book store at the Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, and one floor above the German consulate. The bombings, which occurred during the same afternoon, caused no fatalities.

More than 168,000 visitors were inside the fair grounds when the explosion occurred.

Although precautionary measures have been adopted, and Soviet Russia razed and withdrew its towering exhibit after the first year, this was the first example of intrigue involving a belligerent power at the fair.

Some nations at war with one another have kept exhibits going side by side in ostensible amity.

Patriotic Spirits Celebrate 4th Despite Rain and Seas of Mud

Majority of Georgians Stay Home, But Some Sally to Resorts and Others Go to Parks; Dr. Truett Is Bailed by Muck.

By JACK SPALDING.
Fourth of July was celebrated by Georgians in the best of democratic traditions yesterday—nothing went off exactly as planned.

Rain proved the upsetting factor of the day. Patriotic spirits were willing, but the skies were threatening and the roads were muddy.

So the majority of the state stayed home and enjoyed the first real day of rest in many a moon. Some took the Thursday holiday as a good excuse not to work Friday or Saturday and sallied forth to seaside and mountain resorts to be gone until Monday.

The harder of the masses braved the elements and moved out to Lakewood park for the automobile races only to find them postponed, while others attended the dedication of North Fulton park.

The piously inclined left early to hear Dr. George Truett's sermon at famous Old Salem campgrounds between Conyers and Covington. But the eminent Baptist divine and others found themselves balked by mud as black and hard to conquer as sin.

So Dr. Truett spoke in a gymnasium at Covington, while a lot of those who went to hear him dug their cars out of the muck between Conyers and the campgrounds.

The first fatality of the day reported by the state highway patrol was that of Joe Brown Davis, 49, of Dalton. Davis was killed when his car was struck by the northbound Dixie Flyer at a grade crossing near Dalton. His companion, Richard A. Baker, also of Dalton, sustained a broken leg.

In Savannah, Homer Lee Sowell, 35, died of injuries received in an automobile accident on the Ogeechee road, two and one-half miles south of the city. The car skidded and struck a tree. He was alone in the car.

In Atlanta the first serious accident of the Fourth occurred at 10:30 o'clock in the morning at the intersection of Central avenue and Richardson street.

The victim was 12-year-old Freeman Franklin Weaver, of 459 Crew street, S. W., who suffered a brain concussion when the bicycle on which he was riding collided with an automobile reportedly driven by Louis Theos, 34, of 417 Pryor street, S. W. Police charged Theos with reckless driving—accident.

Braving the weather, good crowds turned out to hear three of Georgia's gubernatorial candidates promise no more taxes and swear undying defense of constitutional rights and liberties.

Political fealty was sworn over barbecue, watermelon and Brunswick stew to the accompaniment of frying catfish, jug bands and much melancholy fiddling.

Sociologists, already debating to what extent the declining French birth rate hastened the downfall

July 4th Mud Bars Dr. Truett From Salem

Dr. George W. Truett delivered his great Fourth of July sermon at Covington High school gymnasium yesterday, when hub-deep mud on the roads to Old Salem Campground made the original site for his address inaccessible to more than a handful of the throng which sought to hear him.

Highway patrolmen, seeing dozens of cars stuck on the Old Salem road, barricaded the route and directed traffic to Covington, where in a last-minute change the address was delivered at the gymnasium to a crowd of approximately 1,000.

Among those who reached Old Salem before the roads became impassable and were thus not informed of the change to Covington, were Preston S. Arkwright, scheduled to present Dr. Truett, and the Salvation Army band, which was to have provided the music.

After waiting until noon Mr. Arkwright and the band returned to Atlanta and a small crowd, which had managed to pass over the slippery roads, dispersed.

At Covington, the program went on without further misfortune. Major Robert J. Guinn, president of the Old Salem Campground Association, spoke in welcome; Dr. Bascom Anthony, eminent Methodist divine, pronounced the invocation. Dr. M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech, read the Declaration of Independence in place of Dr. S. V. Sanford, who is ill, and Dr. Louise D. Newton introduced Dr. Truett.

Last night Dr. Truett spoke to more than 5,000 persons at the Municipal auditorium here. It was one of the largest crowds yet to hear the distinguished pastor.

Talmadge, Roberts and Howell Express Similar Views.

Three of Georgia's five candidates for Governor boomed from the hustings yesterday to Fourth of July crowds replete with barbecue and fried fish.

All three showed a remarkable similarity of views on major issues and two—Columbus Roberts and Hugh Howell—pounced upon the third, red-gallused Eugene Talmadge, for bayonet rule during his former term at the state's helm.

At Ellaville, in south Georgia,

Other political stories will be found on Page 8. Pictures on Page 12.

Howell, Atlanta lawyer, charged his present opponents with having stolen his platform.

Stolen planks which he claimed as originally his, he said, were: No more military rule for Georgia; continuation of the social program, but with no new taxes to finance it; and liberal support for schools and colleges.

Talmadge at Albany.
At Albany, 50 miles away, Talmadge reviewed the achievements of his administration, begun in 1932, and pledged that if elected Governor he would pay school teachers their past due salaries, put the Highway Department on a business basis, and help counties suffering from homestead exemptions by giving them additional highway maintenance contracts.

Unusual in Talmadge's platform was a plank on which he would require only one automobile license per family—a license for the head of the house.

Roberts in Mountains.
Up at Blue Ridge in the north Georgia mountains, Commissioner of Agriculture Columbus Roberts told a crowd made mellow by fiddle-music that "Georgia will face the greatest financial crisis in its history on January 1." If elected, he said, he would "put all the state's finances on a business-like foundation."

As the others, he advocated payment of teacher's back salaries, approved a seven-month school term and free textbooks, and plunked for wider vocational training in mechanics, agriculture and commerce.

Abit Nix and Braswell Deen, the other candidates for Governor, fired their opening campaign guns before the Fourth.

Nazis Relent for Fliers Of France and Belgium
BERLIN, July 4.—(AP)—Unfavorable "special treatment" of French and Belgian air force prisoners of war has now been discontinued, it was reported today by DNB, official German news agency.

The retaliatory measures, in effect since May 27, were ordered by Marshal Goering, DNB said, after he learned that French and Belgians were treating captured German fliers contrary to international law. French and Belgian air force prisoners will now receive the same treatment accorded other captured enemy fliers, it was said.

McCurtain's Execution Is Postponed in Dublin
DUBLIN, July 4.—(AP)—It was announced officially tonight that the execution of Thomas McCurtain, 22-year-old son of a former lord mayor of Cork, has been postponed until July 13.

McCurtain, originally scheduled to be hanged tomorrow for the murder of a detective, was denied a conditional writ of habeas corpus by the Dublin high court today.

SCENE OF HISTORIC NAVAL BATTLE—This is a view of French warships at Oran, Algeria, at the outbreak of the present war. Yesterday several French battleships were sunk or crippled by fire from British warships at Oran as British fought to keep her former ally's ships from Axis hands. Most of the fleet was reported captured.

U. S. Decision Believed Near In Tokyo Crisis

European Developments May Force Change in Our Policy.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—Japan's three-year-old war on China, now developed into a claim for domination of all east Asia, brought the United States closer tonight to a momentous decision on whether to try to maintain its traditional policy in the Far East, or make up its quarrel with Tokyo.

Disturbed by German successes in Europe and potential threats to the New World, administration leaders watched with growing concern Japan's moves to squeeze foreign interests out of the orient.

They remained silent on a Japanese naval spokesman's assertion today that abandonment by the United States of "unwarrantable interference with and obstruction of" Japan's policies on the far eastern continent was needed to relieve concern there over American-Japanese relations.

The American stand was interpreted in a different light in informed quarters here, and there was no apparent disposition to meet, at this time, any of the conditions Japan demanded.

Policy Unaltered.
Despite fears about the safety of the western hemisphere, United States policy toward the far east remained unaltered by any official declarations or even intimations.

That policy, as enunciated in a note to Japan two and a half years ago under world conditions much less critical than today, was: A refusal to recognize Japan's right "to prescribe what shall be the terms and conditions of a 'new order' in areas not under its sovereignty and to constitute itself the repository of authority and the agent of destiny in regard thereto."

But how long it can be maintained under new conditions depended on many factors, chief of which was the ability of Britain to repel invasion, and keep its powerful fleet. With that fleet in German-Italian hands, withdrawal of the United States fleet from the Pacific might become necessary, giving Japan a free hand to force control over east Asia.

U. S. Japan Mark Time.
Thus Japan appeared to be waiting, like the United States, on European developments before going "all out" on enforcement of the new "Asiatic Monroe Doctrine," but meanwhile moving step by step toward the day when perhaps it could be done without serious risks.

British and French reverses in Europe gave Japan the opportunity to speed up the war on China, which began three years ago next Sunday.

Nazis Lost Nearly 400,000 On Western Front, British Say

20 German Planes Bomb New Naval Yard in Daring Daylight Raid; Two of Attackers Believed Shot Down at Sea.

LONDON, July 4.—(AP)—British military informants tonight estimated that Germany's casualties since May 10—the date of the westward Nazi drive against the Low Countries and France—had been about 400,000, exclusive of prisoners subsequently released.

These informants, recalling that Germany had acknowledged 156,492 dead, wounded or missing between May 10 and June 25, declared:

"The general conclusion is that German official figures are not worth very much."

Meanwhile, 20 or more German bombing planes smashed at Britain's big new naval base, Portland, in broad daylight and destroyed a naval auxiliary vessel, a tug and a lighter, then swept back overnight to renew the pounding of England from the air.

There was an "undetermined" number of casualties in the navy yard raid. Two of the attackers may have been shot down at sea.

Daring Assault.
The Portland assault was the most daring of a number of sorties which have become daily diet for the British in the preliminaries of the battle of Britain.

The score or more of bombers which assailed Portland harbor in waves of three were retaliating perhaps for raids by the British yesterday and last night on German communications, oil plants, transport, depots and airports in Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium and northwestern France.

Hundreds of residents of Portland ignored alarms to watch the German assault on the island naval base which Great Britain built to guard against an enemy thrust into the English Channel from the west.

They saw British spitfire fighters engage German bombers over the sea. The Germans scored a direct hit on the auxiliary vessel.

"I saw several running battles in the air," said one witness, "and one of the attackers disappeared out to sea, losing height rapidly with smoke pouring from the tail."

A lighterman on his small loading ship said, "I saw a plane coming and I shouted to my mates, 'There's a Jerry!' I said my prayers. They dropped one bomb and missed, but we were drenched with spray."

The overnight raids started when darkness closed out the late twilight. Anti-aircraft guns blazed at the raiders heard over the northeast coast at an altitude of 2,000 feet. Heavy explosive bombs were dropped. There was no immediate report of the extent of damage.

Enraged Hitler To 'Let' France Scuttle Vessels

London Newspaper Says 250 War Craft Taken By England.

By The Associated Press.
The British navy has fallen with reluctant ferocity upon the fleet of its old French ally, and in battle and by threat of battle has wrested the great bulk of it from the reaching grasp of Germany.

This, the strangest of all naval actions in the world's history, was announced yesterday in the house of commons by Prime Minister Churchill in a

LONDON, July 4.—(AP)—Prime Minister Churchill mentioned by name today in his report on the British fleet's defeat of French warships only one of the attacking craft: the aircraft carrier Ark Royal.

After telling of the action from British guns, he went on:

"It was followed by heavy attacks from our naval aircraft carried on the Ark Royal."

The Germans claimed to have sunk or badly damaged the Ark Royal and some months ago German radio announcers were saying:

"Ask Churchill what became of the Ark Royal."

speech that was like no other ever heard in its ancient halls.

With tears on his heavy cheeks and his voice tight in pride and sorrow, Churchill told commons how with "aching hearts" the British government has seen to it that the French-surrender cabinet of Marshal Petain would never carry out its promise to turn its battle vessels over to Germany—which only now awaits the chance to strike a last great blow at Britain across the channel.

Hitler Enraged.
Adolf Hitler, enraged by the British fleet's action, has given the French navy permission to scuttle its warships remaining at large, or do as it pleases to avoid British seizure, Berlin officials said.

The Daily Herald said nearly 250 French warships—the greater part of the French fleet—have fallen into British hands.

The well-informed British press association indicated early today that some French war vessels in addition to those first taken over or disabled by the British have moved to anchorage in Scottish waters.

(The Italian Stefani News Agency said the French government has ordered that British ships or planes coming within 12 miles of the coasts of France or French possessions be shot down.)

Sonja Henie Wed To Dan Topping

CHICAGO, July 4.—(AP)—Sonja Henie, skating star of the screen and skating rink, was married today to Dan Topping, wealthy New York sportsman.

The ceremony was performed in the Lake Shore drive apartment of Arthur H. Wirtz, an official of the Chicago stadium, by the Rev. Dr. Joshua Oden, pastor of the Irving Park Lutheran church, in the presence of a few friends of the couple and relatives of Miss Henie.

While their names had been linked romantically for more than six months, they became engaged in New York just a week ago and came to Chicago last night.

Canada Offers Officers For French Warships

LONDON, July 4.—(AP)—Canada has offered to supply any additional personnel required to officer units of the French fleet now in British hands, the colonial office said tonight.

TRAINING CORPS UNIT.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., July 4.—(P)—The Glynn county board of education wants a junior reserve officers' training corps unit located in the county. They voted at a recent meeting to file an application for establishment of a corps and also voted to co-operate with the Brunswick board of trade in sponsoring another ground course in flying. The Civil Aeronautics Authority recently sponsored a course here.

Frances Brewer Rests in Hospital

Frances Brewer, 16-year-old schoolgirl who was found Wednesday, unconscious after a two-day disappearance, in a woodland off Ridgeway road, was reported in a satisfactory condition at Grady hospital yesterday. Seriously ill for several months, she left her home at 1310 Iverson street late Monday, apparently the victim of temporary amnesia. She was discovered by residents of the Ridgeway section, who heard her moaning as she lay exhausted in the underbrush. Apparently recovering from the attack, she was rushed to the city hospital by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Brewer, who said the girl had told them she could not remember anything that had happened since eating dinner before her disappearance.

500 Witness Celebration at North Fulton

Dr. Brittain Talks on Americanism; 'Fat' Men Run Race.

By CHARLES GILMORE.
More than 500 persons sat around the arena of North Fulton park's new equestrian ring yesterday afternoon and celebrated Independence Day by watching an assortment of races run by everybody from fat men to skinny little girls and by laughing at 30 mud-smeared boys try to climb a greased pole.

The holiday which was being observed was mentioned twice during the program, once at the beginning, when Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, talked on Americanism, and once at the end, when the crowd stood to pledge allegiance to the flag.

"Fat" Men Race.
The highlight of the competition came when 24 "fat" men lined up at one end of the ring for a 100-yard dash. A false start sent half of them scurrying down the field, led by Rube Garland, a candidate for county solicitor.

Sent back for an official run, they came trundling down the field like a division of mechanized troops storming a salient. It was won by a dark horse, weighing 162 pounds, who is a swimming instructor at a local camp.

The essence of democracy was displayed by the efforts of 30 boys to climb a 40-foot pole greased until it shined. They finally elected five of their number to build a human pyramid and thereby reach the top and a five-dollar bill.

Hold Potato Race.
Thirty girls, from 10 to 15 years of age, carried small potatoes on spoons for a distance of 200 yards. The race was won by Wanda Hathaway, of 2269 Cascade road.

An exhibition golf event, which was to serve as a dedication for the new North Fulton course, was postponed until 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when Charley Yates, Harold Sargent, Gene Dahlbender, and Herb Norton will go the rounds.

A horse show, sponsored by the Boots and Saddle Club, preceded the races. A team demonstrated five different gaits and two boys made frantic efforts to post while riding bareback.

Service Is Started By Stratoclipper

MIAMI, Fla., July 4.—(P)—The world's first sub-stratosphere passenger service was inaugurated today when Pan American Airways sent its four-motored stratoclipper, Rainbow, to Barranquilla, Colombia.

The Rainbow, one of three Pan American planes to be used in the Latin-American service, made the trip in six hours, 27 minutes with 13 passengers and a cargo of mail and express. Another plane took the passengers, of four nationalities, on to the Canal Zone before dark.

The 20-ton plane decreased the previous flying time of two days.

HASTE MAKES WASTE—These little ladies wasted a lot of potatoes in a race held yesterday at North Fulton Park. First to carry a potato-in-a-spoon across the finish line was Wanda Hathaway, of 2269 Cascade road, who is not seen in this picture because of her efficiency.

TID-BIT NAG—Fritz Orr, of 3245 Nancy's Creek road, is really not as tall as he looks. The horse he rode yesterday at North Fulton Park's celebration is just a mite undersized.

Life of Nation Is At Stake, Nix Declares

Demands State Administration That Will Give U. S. United Support.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
GRAYSON, Ga., July 4.—Abit Nix declared at a Gwinnett county-wide political rally here today that "the life of our nation is at stake," and demanded a state administration for the next two years that will give our federal government the support of a united Georgia.

"All Eugene Talmadge has to offer is confusion and chaos if he is re-elected Governor," he said.

Appeal for Unity.
Nix appealed for "unity among our people and a state administration for the next two years that will work in harmony with the federal government in building up a national defense sufficient to protect our country's existence and keep us out of war."

Replying to the opening speech of Talmadge at Albany today, Nix declared: "In 1932, when I was candidate for Governor, I told the people that the election of Talmadge would bring confusion and chaos in our state government. In his four years as Governor, he proved that not only had he no idea of what government should do for the people, but he also showed that he had rather create strife than harmony. Instead of conducting government he carried on a four-year ruckus."

Begged Another Chance.
"After his first two years, the people were about to turn him out because of his refusal to co-operate with President Roosevelt and the national Democratic administration. But Talmadge pleaded with them for another chance, claiming that 'in Georgia, it is Talmadge and Roosevelt.' The people believed him, but no sooner was he safe in the Governor's chair for another term than he began to plot with the Republicans and Huey Long to overthrow Roosevelt."

"Today he showed he is the same Talmadge, maybe a little bit shopworn, but, as usual, promising more strife and turmoil if he is re-elected; strife and turmoil that will prevent our state from uniting behind the federal administration in a program of preparedness. 'The leopard can't change its spots,' Eugene Talmadge can't change his nature. He is the same Talmadge who spent four years in office blocking social legislation, fighting the Roosevelt administration, reducing the taxes of the rich and tearing Georgia asunder. He would do it again."

Woman Works 20 Years On Religious Book

Mrs. W. Frank Wells, Hapeville, Writes on Life of Jesus.

"Jesus and Broken Personalities," a 34-chapter book revealing the life of Jesus as portrayed in the Book of John, has been written by Mrs. W. Frank Wells, of Hapeville, after 20 years of work. It will be available in Atlanta book stores within a week.

Designed to tell in interesting and dramatic form the life of Christ as set forth by John, the book is set against a historical background far more complete than can be had in the limited verses of John's gospel.

An active member of the Hapeville Methodist church, Mrs. Wells has taught in Methodist groups for a number of years. She is a graduate of G. S. C. W. and has been interested in the Bible and the Roman world of early Christianity for nearly a quarter of a century.

Big Business Interests May Hurt Willkie

Recognition as Wall Street Spokesman Regarded as Harmful.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Now that the tumult of the Philadelphia convention and the barrage of newspaper editorials and political speculation which naturally follows has begun to recede, calmer minds in Washington are getting together to look Mr. Willkie squarely in the eye, so to speak, and to ask: "Just what do you have to offer?"

On the credit side of the ledger, these minds admit, Willkie offers: The glamor of a "dark-horse" candidate and his natural appeal to a sports-loving nation.

The good political background of being of small-town origin and a college law degree obtained largely through his own efforts, which included some farming experience.

Top Utility Post.
The attainment of top position in one of the nation's greatest public utilities.

No embarrassing previous record in politics.

A pleasing and dynamic personality.

Observers are carefully scanning these "credits" and are attempting to prophesy what they will mean to the voters next November.

Of one thing there is apparent unanimity of opinion—by the time the voters go to the polls the dark-horse glamor now possessed by Willkie will be all but forgotten. Not even the almost incredibly vast and favorable publicity received by Willkie before, during and after the convention, it is believed, can be expected to survive months of campaigning during which he will be looked upon as the Republican candidate for President, and not a "Cinderella man."

Big Business Spokesman.

In the same manner will the poor-boy-to-corporation-president theme now so prevalent be smashed. The intensity of a presidential campaign will leave Willkie standing out in the minds of the average voters, observers declare, as the spokesman of big business epitomized by Wall Street and, these observers point out, no amount of glamor can withstand the fact that the aims of Wall Street and those of the vast majority of the nation's people, in the small towns and on the farms, especially, are not the same.

On the assumption that President Roosevelt is the Democratic candidate, and there is nothing tangible at the moment upon which to base any belief that this assumption is not as logical now as it was before the naming of Willkie, the voters will be afforded an opportunity to decide between two distinct schools of thought.

Legionnaire Kelly Urges Aggressive U. S. Defense
CHICAGO, July 4.—(P)—“The will to peace is not the road to peace,” American Legion National Commander Raymond J. Kelly said today in a Legion broadcast. If the United States is to “survive the turbulence of the present,” Kelly continued, it must have a policy of “aggressive national defense, not appeasement and abasement,” and must be “powerful enough to ward off any foe.”

French Fleet Broken, Taken Says Britain

sessions will be attacked at once.) This, in substance, is what Churchill reported: In a 10-minute action-Wednesday off Oran and Mers El-Kebir, Algeria, British guns sank a French battleship of the Bretagne class; damaged and grounded a battlecruiser of the Strasbourg class; sank or set on fire two destroyers and France's only sea-plane carrier, the 10,000-ton Commandant Teste; torpedoed an escaping battlecruiser; probably the Dunkerque.

The Strasbourg and Dunkerque are listed by most authorities as battleships, although Churchill called them battlecruisers.

Many in Port. Before this happened, Churchill disclosed for the first time, a great flotilla of French warships entered the English ports of Sheerness, Plymouth and Portsmouth. These, now out of any possible hostile action for the duration of the war, included:

Two battleships; two light cruisers; a number of submarines including the 2,880-ton Surcouf, the world's largest; eight destroyers and 200 mine-sweeping anti-submarine craft.

At Alexandria, Egypt, the British seized control of a French battleship, four French cruisers and several smaller ships—vessels that only a few hours before had joined their former British comrades in arms in fighting off an Italian air raid.

Thus, it appeared from this extraordinary recapitulation of a campaign into which the British navy went with determination yet “anguish” that only one active capital ship was left to the French government.

Presumably this was the Dunkerque, which with some smaller ships fled the Oran engagement for Toulon. That mighty vessel, Churchill said, would be out of action for months, crippled by a British torpedo.

That engagement, as Churchill heavily described it in the house, was carried out without the slightest interference from Italian war vessels.

“The Italian fleet,” he said drily, “for whose reception we had also made preparations and which is considerably stronger numerically than the fleet we used at Oran, kept prudently out of the way,” adding:

“We shall take the necessary steps to maintain command of the Mediterranean.”

(From Geneva there had been reports that the Italian fleet was speeding to the aid of the French.)

Final Break Seen. A final rupture of diplomatic relations with the Petain government was predicted by informed men.

Churchill began his report by saying that what he had to say was said with “sincere sorrow,” and near its completion he made clear that the resolute action against the French fleet should convince the world that “there is no thought here of peace.”

“Any idea of that,” he said, “should be completely swept out of the way by the very drastic and grievous action we have felt ourselves compelled to take.”

Little Bloodshed. The seizure of the French vessels in the British harbors, Churchill reported, was accomplished by boarding parties after notice had been given when possible to the vessels' captains.

There was no bloodshed, he said, save on the submarine Surcouf, where there was a “scuffle” in which a British seaman was killed, two British officers and a seaman wounded and one French officer killed and another wounded. Many French seamen, he declared, “expressed an ardent desire to continue the war.”

He made it plain that there might yet be fighting in Alexandria if the commanding officer of French vessels there should decide to try to fight his way out.

He said, too, as to the new French fighting ships still at large: “... It is our inflexible resolve to do everything possible in order to prevent them from falling into German hands.”

The Prime Minister repeated that the Petain government had ordered the fleet's surrender in violation of assurances that this would never be done.

Standing tensely before a now cheering, now silent, house, he told of the cabinet's unanimous decision, taken in melancholy determination, that the French must give up or go down with their ships.

Agonizing Suspense. British guns were loosed at Oran, he said, only after agonizing hours of suspense and the final rejection by the French Admiral Gensoul of these British alternatives:

(a) Sail with us and continue to fight for glory against the Germans and Italians.

(b) Sail with reduced crews under our control to a British port. The reduced crews will be repatriated at the earliest possible moment.

“If either of these courses is adopted by you we will restore your ships to France at the conclusion of the war or pay full compensation if they are damaged meanwhile.”

“Alternatively, if you feel bound to stipulate that your ships are not to be used against the Germans or Italians unless they break the armistice conditions then sail with them with reduced crews to some French port in the West Indies—Martinique for instance—where they can be demilitarized or be perhaps entrusted to the United States and remain safe until the end of the war, the crews being repatriated to France.”

“If you refuse these fair offers, I (the British commander) must with profound regret require you to sink your ships within six hours. Failing the above I have the orders of the government to use whatever force may be necessary to prevent your ships from falling into German or Italian hands.”

Guns Speak. This document was ceremoniously presented, ceremoniously declined—and then the guns spoke. For all this, Churchill announced his willingness—and that of his government—to be responsible, now and in history.

“I leave the judgment of our actions with confidence to parliament; I leave it to the nation; I leave it to the United States of America; I leave it to history...” he said.

“I fear,” he said at one point, “that the loss of life among the French and in the harbor (in the Oran fight) must have been very heavy, as we were compelled to use a very severe measure of force and immense explosions were heard.”

“None of the British ships taking part in the action was affected in gun power or mobility by the heavy gun power directed on it.”

Shaken, his eyes still wet, and the cheers thundering in the house, Churchill finished his speech with a warning that hard days were ahead.

“We must, of course, expect to be attacked or even invaded,” he said, “if that proves possible—it has not proved so yet—in our own island home here very long.”

I call upon all subjects of His Majesty and upon our Allies and our well-wishers—and there are not a few—all over the world, on both sides of the Atlantic, to give us their utmost aid.”

Hitler Enraged. Hitler was enraged by the British fleet's destruction of of republican France; were not much cheered by the news that only three July 4th babies were born in Grady's maternity wards, and two at Georgia Baptist hospital.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Seals, of 1050 Currier street, and a daughter each to Mr. and Mrs. William E. Timbs, of 553 Plum street, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Ivey, of Eubanks avenue, Egan Park, at Grady.

At Georgia Baptist, daughters were born to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Pitts, of 741 Ponce de Leon court, and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Foster, of 168 Campbell street.

July 4 was celebrated at the Confederate Soldiers' Home with a talk by Major Len Sullivan, commissioner of public safety, and a dinner climaxed by a cake embossed with the names of all the veterans present.

Fireworks popped and sizzled daintily outside city limits, but at a late hour last night, no accidents had been reported.

Word of holiday and pre-holiday accidents, in addition to the Davis death, continued to come in. Two Kansas City (Kan.) men, Lee Sharp and Albert Kelter, were being treated yesterday in a Savannah hospital for injuries received Wednesday five miles south of Riceboro. The accident occurred when a left rear tire blew out, causing the car to turn over and head back south in a roadside ditch.

Sharp, who was driving, received internal injuries, and Kelter received a head laceration.

Harris county Sheriff M. D. Hadley reported the strangest accident of the week, the death of Arthur Farris, 19, who was killed by a train while sleep-walking near Hamilton Tuesday night.

The sheriff quoted G. T. Turner as stating he was sleeping in a shed with Farris and woke to find him missing. He later found his body near the railroad tracks. Turner said he had known the dead man about a year and knew he was a somnambulist.

the French fleet and has given the French his permission to scuttle their warships remaining at large or do as they please to avoid British seizure.

DNB, official German news agency, said the Petain government of France had informed the German armistice commission of its intention to sink French warships if they are attacked and unable to escape their former Allies.

Other developments as reported by German sources, included:

1. The “blowing up” of the French battleship Bretagne, 22,189 tons; the firing of the French battlecruiser Dunkerque (or Strasbourg), 26,500 tons, and Provence, 22,189 tons, and the French destroyer Mogador, 2,884 tons, and the escape of the French battleship Strasbourg (or Dunkerque), 26,500 tons, five flotilla leaders and a number of torpedo boats and submarines—all in the British-French battle.

2. A torpedo hit by a German submarine on the 23,000-ton British aircraft carrier Illustrious, newest carrier of the British fleet.

3. Two heavy bombs hit on a “large vessel” in British convoy.

4. The bombing yesterday of British channel and North sea quays, coastal fortifications, barracks and arms and plane factories.

German commentators raged at the British because of the attack off Oran. A major premise of German indignation was that Germany, by the armistice agreement, had pledged that surrendered units of the French fleet would be interned and not used against the British.

Some commentators called the Oran attack “incredible action” and that official inspired commentary, Dienst aus Deutschland, suggested that Prime Minister Churchill might be “hanged” by the British.

DNB said the British attack found the French unprepared. The French warships were without steam and thus had no power to operate their heavy gun turrets.

Asked whether France must now be regarded as at war with Britain, an authorized German spokesman said sarcastically: “Certainly it is not a state of friendship between the two.”

NLRB Reports Handling Total of 28,132 Cases

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(P)—The National Labor Relations Board announced today, on its fifth anniversary, that it had handled a total of 28,132 cases, involving 6,140,000 workers, since it was established. Of these, 25,030 cases have been closed, it said.

“Ninety-two percent of the closed cases were disposed of through agreement of employer and employee representatives, dismissal by the board, or withdrawal by the complaining union or individual,” the announcement said.

There are about 1,800 daily newspapers in Japan.

Text of Dr. Truett's Sermon

The text of Dr. George W. Truett's sermon, "Blessed is the Nation Whose God is the Lord," delivered yesterday in the gymnasium at Covington, Ga., is herein presented in full:

My dear Mr. Chairman, and all of you, my honored friends and fellow workers, you will forget all the overflyingly extravagant things said by the good friend, Dr. Newton, who presented me to you, because there is very little that he said about me that is so, and you will let me cast myself upon your fullest sympathy.

Long ago when God's people had won a great victory for His glory and for humanity, the people came together to sing this grateful song, "This is the day the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it." Surely some such emotion is in all our hearts on this significant anniversary of our nation's birth. There are two days in the life of the American people vastly revealing—our national Thanksgiving Day and our national Independence Day. As long as our American people will worthily commemorate these two days just named, our nation will live. Just 164 years ago today our nation was born.

If ever a country seemed to be clearly marked out as a providential creation, ours is that country. God has seemed to be our pillow of cloud by day and our pillow of fire by night. Well did Emerson say, "Our American democracy seems to be the last effort of Divine Providence." And well did the immortal Gladstone say, "The United States of America is a nation which is missionary to all the countries of the world."

On a day like this, it behooves us to look backward, and an occasional backward look will give us renewed patience and joy and faith. The Hebrews, that forceful and mighty people, had a way of looking backward now and then, "Look unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham, your father, and unto Sarah, that bare you: for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him."

PIONEER AN INSPIRING FIGURE SINCE ABRAHAM
From the day that Abraham went out from Ur of the Chaldees

to build up a land God had marked out for him, from that day to this, the pioneer has ever been a challenging and inspiring character.

One of our great American poets pictures America before there were the first footprints upon her soil by civilized people, and the cry, "Give me men to match my mountains." The God of the nations answered that prayer, and we have been given this great land between the oceans and from the lakes to the gulf. The poet has said in his extravagance of language that America is a grand land, grand in her rocks and hills, her woods and temples, hills, grand in her wealth, and grand in her liberty.

It behooves those of us who have come to this service to look backward for a period, to think of those who made possible for us this land of the free. And we think of those early settlers and builders in this noble community, made historic by faithful women and heroic men. Many of them passed on to that other Land. One wonders if they do not see us now. And we will go on, with renewed devotion in the cause of humanity and for the glory of God. Some still linger with us here. One thinks of Bishop Candler and others who have stood with him. Each memory inspires us on to higher and worthier service.

What is the desirable element in building a nation—a worthy nation? The answer comes quickly in a thousand places from God's Word. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." Rugged old Carlyle was right when he said, "Religion is the determining factor in any and every civilization."

There have been different standards for nations and for people. There has been the standard of physical might where Hercules is fairly worshipped, where the doctrine of might makes right, where force is the thing upon which people rely to carry their point and build their governmental order. In the Middle Ages people thought of greatness in terms of going forth with the sword and the biggest man and the greatest was the man who destroyed the most people. Also, there is a revival of that thought abroad in the world today. The doctrine of force is a doctrine that must pass. With the desire for lands and gold and increased positions and power, that conception of life must pass from the face of the earth. It has been foretold by the prophet of the day toward which we are all to look—of that day when they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war anymore. "Blessed is that nation whose God is the Lord."

FINANCIAL STANDARD FOR GREATNESS NOT WORTHY
Then another standard is the financial standard. I would not say that men ought not to strive to amass property, but it should be by the right means always and then to employ their gains to the right objective always. But the turned back, to learn that the meeting was changed to Covington and heard the speaker after all. Others just stayed stuck. About 1,000 persons heard the Covington address and then spread their lunches beneath shelter of nearby porches.

financial standard for greatness is not an abiding and worthy standard.

The great poet, Edwin Markham, a little while before his death, said:

"We are blind until we see
That in the human plan
Nothing is worth the making if
It does not make the man."

"Why build these cities glorious
If man unbuilded goes?
In vain we build the work, unless
The builder also grows."

The financial standard is not the standard of worthy, abiding greatness for a people.

A standard far ahead of this just named is the intellectual standard. Knowledge is power, always has been, always will be. The man who knows has the advantage over the people who do not know. Without any army or money, man have had power with their pens. Witness William Shakespeare and John Bunyan. But the intellectual standard is not the highest and the abiding standard of greatness.

On this anniversary we need to call ourselves back to God's standard for worthy and abiding greatness for a people and their country. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

Christ gave us the true standard for greatness when He said, "Whoever would be great, let him be servant of all." Here we have Christ's standard of worthy and abiding greatness for the individual and for the nation. It is the greatness of service. Here is the test of life. And it was said of Him, the one ideal which the world has seen, "He went about doing good."

ARRIVED, BUT NO SPEECH—Among the valiant few who reached Old Salem over the muddy roads yesterday were G. C. Adams, of Covington, who, while waiting for the crowd that never showed up, amused himself by playing with tiny Kit Thronburg, daughter of Mrs. Captain H. E. Thronburg, of the Salvation Army band. Blocked by the mud they safely traveled, nobody was able to reach them to tell them plans were changed and Dr. George W. Truett was to deliver his Fourth of July address at Covington. About 55 persons waited in vain at Salem. (Story on Page 1.)

GIVE OUR LIVES FOR THE WORLD

And every one of us, captivated by the same motive, and keeping before us the same objective, ought to give our lives in unselfish ministry for the world. The world wants the right kind of service.

A great believer is always a great doer. Witness Moses and Paul. Witness John Wesley, and William Carey. Witness John Knox and Phillips Brooks. Witness Robert E. Lee and witness Bishop Candler, great believers and great doers. When, one day, a man asked Jesus, "Who is my neighbor?" Jesus gave the answer in that parable of the Good Samaritan. Your neighbor is any person who needs you. He may be very near and dear to you or he may be far removed from you in your great city or country, or he may live in another part of the world. But if he needs you, he is your neighbor. And that makes big men, world-minded men, citizens with the horizon pushed back.

As followers of Christ we are to be world-citizens. We must invest our lives. But not as the miser. The story is told of a miser who died recently in one of our American cities. The women of the community had come to him, bringing him food that he might not starve and taking care of him the best they could in his seeming plight of poverty. But when he died they found something over four million dollars in gold and bank notes and government bonds. Of what value to the world is such a life? It is like the fig tree that refused to bear fruit.

Another story is told of a young man, the son of very wealthy parents, who invited his friends to a great dinner, telling them that he was going to give them a great thrill at the end of the dinner. And as they finished eating, he told them the time had come now when they would have the thrill of a lifetime. He led the way to a little bridge over a fast-flowing stream, now swollen by the recent storms, and cast himself into the waters below and was a suicide. Now man may take that side and cast his powers and his God-given talents away.

Our lives are a trusteeship, a stewardship. I owe myself to humanity. I am in the world for a purpose.

URGENT DAY OF RENEWED DEDICATION.

Jesus' standard is the standard for abiding and worthwhile greatness. And we ought to make this a day of renewed dedication to the highest and best things in human life. Pericles of old used to take the men of Athens out to the graves of the mighty and recount their deeds of bravery and Pericles would preach to the young men that devotion to the ideals and standards that made their forefathers great.

The motive of Christ ought to be indwelt in our lives. Motive is the oxygen of life.

Well may we say with Kipling:

"The tumult and the shouting dies—
The captains and the kings depart.
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!"

Far-called, our navies melt away—
On one and headland sinks the fire,
Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!
Judge of the nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget!"

What makes life is the right motive. Altruism brings great blessing in many ways but it is not sufficiently strong. The highest and truest motive is the will of God. What is the will of God for our lives? The highest duty and privilege of human life is to do the will of God. And we ought to have as our motto, even that which Jesus had: "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me, and to finish His work."

The wrong standards are to be discarded and the right upheld and maintained without stint or reserve by us all.

us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

MOST CONGRUOUS TIME TO REDEDICATE

Today, this anniversary day, surely is a most congruous time for us to rededicate our all to Him and for Him Whose we are and Whom we love to serve.

Men ask me, "Doesn't the world condition prove that Christianity has failed?" And I answer, "On the contrary. It proves that everything else has failed." Big businessmen have felt they could push the button which would stop war. Politicians felt that they knew how to stop it, but they have failed. Scientists were sure that the machines of science have been put to work to carry it on. And above it all, Christ stands with open hands and says, "Try Me."

"Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy, and My burden is light."

It is a day for rededication, recommitment to Him who is Lord over all and blessed forever more. We are to say with Dan Crawford, brave worker in Africa,

"Hats off to the past, coats off to the future."

And in the days ahead may we let Christ have the primacy in our thought and in our loyalty and in our service. And as we rededicate ourselves, we will sing as our fathers sang:

"Faith of our fathers, living still,
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword,
Oh, how our hearts beat high with joy,
When'er we hear that glorious word,
Faith of our fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death."

"Faith of our fathers, faith and prayer,
Have kept our country brave and free,
And through the truth that comes from God,
Her children have true liberty!
Faith of our fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death."

"Faith of our fathers, we will love
Both friend and foe in all the strife;
And preach thee, too, as love knows how,
By kindly words and virtuous life,
Faith of our fathers, holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death."

SAVE WITH SAFETY

Preserving Time Has Arrived

SINCE ancient times men and women have concerned themselves not only with getting food for the day's needs, but have with wise forethought, tried to save the overabundance of one season for the months when nature is unproductive. And though canning factories pickle, preserve and can an almost unlimited number of things in vast quantities, often the thrifty housewife finds it advantageous to conserve the larger amounts of fruits and vegetables that she finds on her hands. These she wisely can or preserves and adds to her pantry store with a sense of comfortable frugality. Summer's warm sun and refreshing rains are making vegetables grow and fruits ripen. Thus some thoughts on the subject of home canning and preserving are in order.

After we have provided ourselves with jelly glasses, good jars, wooden spoons, enamel strainer and adequately large kettles, there is yet one more step to take to be sure that our products are fully protected against spoilage.

The most perfect patented jar . . . the clearest looking jelly jar . . . must go into a bath of scalding water immediately before being filled, so that it will be thoroughly sterilized. If it is preserves you are pouring into jars, they must be put into the sterilized containers scalding hot, and a spoon handle run down the edges and sides to liberate any bubbles of air that may be imprisoned. And jars should be filled to the very brim, the screw top put on each one at once, after it is filled. But do not screw the top down until after sealing the contents with melted paraffin.

Jelly glasses or crocks must be scalded for sterilization, the jelly poured in while boiling hot, and the top sealed over with melted paraffin. Wipe the jar or glass close to the fruit to free it of syrup or particles of fruit, then cover the top with a tablespoon of melted paraffin and let the jar stand until the paraffin has set, so it will adhere perfectly to the glass.

Canning differs from preserving chiefly in the amount of sugar used. The fruit may be boiled in a syrup made of one pound of sugar to each quart of water, and the canned product bottled the same as when preserved. But many find it easier and better to cook canned fruit in jars. Pack the fruit tightly in the jars and cover it with the right syrup unless you are canning red fruits, which need more sugar to preserve their color. Place the filled jars in a boiler of water that will half cover them; raise the jars off the bottom of the kettle or boiler by using a rack or inverted pie tin, and do not let the jars touch each other. Cover the kettle and cook until the fruit is tender, filling the jars as the fruit shrinks slightly. Adjust and fasten the screw tops at once and place where the air will not strike the jars while they are cooling.

Canned Berries.
After the berries have been carefully sorted, and lightly washed and drained, pack into cans or jars as closely as possible without crushing. Fill to within one-quarter of an inch of top and cover with hot syrup. Fit rubber and then the lid loosely on glass jars and process in hot water bath, pints, 6 minutes, quarts 12 minutes, counting the time after the water begins to boil. Process No. 2 cans 8 minutes. (Processing means to place cans or jars in hot water up to rim of jar, and boil.)

Jelly.
Do not cook too large amounts of jelly at one time. Two quarts of juice is sufficient for one cooking as it makes a clearer, better product to cook smaller quantities

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION
Edited by SALLY SAVER

ATLANTA, GA., FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 5, 1940.

Canning Fruits

In canning fruits it is advisable to prepare the syrup, which will be needed in advance. The thickness of the syrup to be used depends upon two things: 1. the kind of fruit to be canned, and 2. the desired richness of the product.

Syrup No. 1.—Very thin . . . 1 cup sugar, 4 cups water
Syrup No. 2.—Thin . . . 1 cup sugar, 3 cups water
Syrup No. 3.—Medium . . . 1 cup sugar, 2 cups water
Syrup No. 4.—Medium heavy . . . 1 cup sugar, 1 1/2 cups water
Syrup No. 5.—Thick or heavy . . . 1 cup sugar, 1 cup water

Stir the water and sugar together while heating until well dissolved; bring to boiling point. If allowed to cook longer the thickness of the syrup is increased.

Thin syrup is used for small, soft drinks, soft fruits as peaches, berries, sweet cherries.

Medium syrup is used on sour berries, acid fruits, berries, gooseberries.

Heavy syrup is used on larger sour fruits that are to be extra sweet. The amount of syrup required per jar or can of fruit will vary with the kind and size of fruit, and the packing of fruit in jars. An estimate is as follows: 1-2 cup to pint jar, 3-4 cup to No. 2 can, 1 cup to quart jar, 1 cup to No. 3 can.

ties at a time. Cook jelly rapidly to keep it bright and clear. When jellying stage is reached it will break from the spoon in flakes or sheets. Drops will run together and slide off in a sheet, leaving the edge of the spoon clean. The jelly should be removed from the fire at once and poured into hot glasses. If a jelly thermometer is used the jelly stage is reached from 219 degrees to 221 F.

Blackberry Jelly.
6 quarts blackberries (part half-ripe), 1 pint water.

Wash berries and boil with the water 15 minutes. Strain through jelly bag. Usually 4 cups juice to

Berry Jam

If the busy homemaker missed out on making a supply of strawberry jam, it is not too late to conserve, for the same recipe will work equally well with firm blackberries, raspberries, blueberries, gooseberries, currants or loganberries.

The proportion is three quarts crushed berries to nine cups sugar. It is important to select firm, ripe fruit and to sterilize all jars and glasses thoroughly.

Wash, drain, crush and measure the fruit. Put in a large utensil and bring slowly to the boiling point, stirring constantly. Add sugar and stir over heat until sugar is dissolved. When the sugar is thoroughly absorbed, the heat may be increased. Stir frequently to prevent scorching as the syrup thickens, which should require 10 to 20 minutes. Pour into hot sterilized glasses or jars and seal. This quantity should yield about one dozen glasses.

If ingredients are being used by weight, rather than by cups and quarts, use three-fourths pound sugar to each pound of crushed fruit.

Note: The washing of berries is a delicate task, since the sand is stubborn and a heavy stream of water will bruise the fruit, and absorb precious juices. The safest method is to drop a few berries at a time into a bowl of water, turning gently in as many waters as necessary to remove every particle of sand.

Spiced Vinegar for Pickling.

1 quart vinegar
1 pint sugar
1 tablespoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon allspice
1 tablespoon white mustard seed
1 teaspoon cloves
1 teaspoon salt

The spices may be used either whole or ground, depending upon whether one prefers clear or dark pickles. If they are ground they should be put into a muslin bag and removed from the liquid before the pickles are canned. If the pickle is one that is to be heated in the vinegar, as in the case of pickled beets, the vinegar mixture is not previously heated. If the pickle is to be placed in the jars cold and the hot vinegar poured over, bring vinegar solution slowly to the boiling point, then pour over filled jars.

Cucumber Pickles

(Quick Method).

Wash cucumbers; pour boiling water over them and let stand 5 to 10 minutes. Drain off hot water and pour cold water over them or place under running water until cucumbers are cooled. Drop in til cucumbers are cooled. Drop in spiced vinegar which has been brought to boiling point. After dropping in the cucumbers bring vinegar again to a boil and pack pickles while hot in sterilized jars. Seal.

Peach Preserves.

Cut firm, ripe peaches into halves, take out the stones and pare peach halves. Allow one pound of sugar to each of fruit and add to each pound of sugar a teaspoonful of water. Stir until it is dissolved; set over a moderate fire; when it is boiling hot put in the peaches; let them boil gently until a pure, clear, uniform color. Turn those at the bottom to the top carefully with a skimmer several times, but do not hurry them. When they are clear, take each half up with a spoon and put on flat dishes to become cold. When all are done, let the syrup boil until it is quite thick, pour it into a large pitcher and let it set to cool and settle. When the peaches are cold put them carefully into jars and pour the syrup over them, training the syrup. Some of the kernels from the peach stones may be put into the syrup with the peaches while boiling. Let them remain open one night, then cover. Seal.

Peach, Cantaloupe Conserve.

1 pint diced peaches
1 pint diced cantaloupe
2 lemons, juice and grated rind
3 cups sugar
2-3 cup English walnuts, blanched and chopped.

Combine ingredients, with exception of nut meats. Cook mixture until thick and clear; add nut meats and pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Busying themselves in the making of peach preserves are mother and daughter, who seem to be having a wonderful time. Anticipating no doubt the taste of this delicacy on toast and hot biscuits are Mrs. Aubrey A. Watson and Eleanor.

A noodle ring, center filled with creamed meat, fish or vegetables, is a simple dish with plenty of eye appeal.

Chili Beans Recipe Given By Request

From a young woman in Ellijay, Ga., comes the request that we print on this page a recipe for chili beans. Says she, "to serve 6 or 8 persons." I am pleased to comply with this request:

Chili Beans.
(Serves Six.)
1 onion, chopped
1 tablespoon fat
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 pound ground beef
2 cups canned red kidney beans
1-2 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt

Saute onion in fat until browned; add tomatoes, meat, beans and seasonings. Cover and simmer 20 minutes, adding water in small amounts, if mixture gets too dry.

Huckleberry Cobbler

1 quart huckleberries
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 1/2 cups water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1-4 cup sugar
1 egg
1-2 cup milk
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1-3 teaspoon salt

Pick over berries, wash and drain. Add the 1 1/2 cups sugar and water and cook closely covered until the fruit is tender. Cream butter and the 1-4 cup sugar, gradually add the well beaten egg, the milk and flour sifted with the baking powder and salt. Beat thoroughly and pour over the hot fruit which has been placed in a baking dish or deep pie pan. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees, 30 or 35 minutes. Serve hot or cold.

Slices of a new canned pork, lightly browned and served with poached eggs, are appetizing breakfast fare.

Put Zest in Meals

When appetites lag due to heat and general lassitude, it's time to do things to your foods to build new interest. Change the breakfast menu, include a new salad, incorporate a different ingredient in the salad dressing, serve a new dessert, cook the favorite vegetable in a different way. Here are some suggestions which may help you to put pep in summer menus:

Serve cucumber sandwiches, made by placing thin slices of crisp cucumber between dainty slices of well buttered bread, with tuna or salmon salad, with con-sealed meat loaves and with baked ham.

Mince cold boiled tongue fine, add the yolk of one egg and a little cream. Bring to a boil and spread thickly on slices of hot buttered toast. Serve at once. Nice for luncheon or supper.

For Breakfast: Moisten a slice of bread with milk, add an egg slightly beaten, a cup of chopped ham or cold meat of any kind. Season with salt and pepper and form into little patties. Roll these in flour and fry in butter. Serve with stewed fresh plums.

Don't forget that at least one hot dish in every meal is the rule for summer. Start a meal of cold meats and salads with a hot soup. Begin a hot meal with one of the cold soups which are so good and incidentally, so fashionable!

Hard working men and hard playing children need desserts, but they should be of the cooling sort. Ice creams, sherbets, fruit puddings with custard sauces (because these use liberal quantities of milk and eggs), cake with cold fruit sauce, and refrigerator desserts, and, of course, berry and fruit pies fill the need.

This new-type pressure utensil reduces cooking time of meats and vegetables and is easy to use.

Prize Winning Recipes For This Week

Carrot Casserole.

Submitted by Miss Wylene Forester,
Box 231,
Clayton, Ga.

6 medium carrots
6 medium potatoes
2 large onions
4 slices bacon
1 cup cream
1 teaspoon sugar
Salt and pepper

Slice carrots, onions and potatoes. Brown bacon in skillet and pour bacon fat over vegetables arranged in casserole. Cover casserole and place in moderate oven until vegetables are tender. Remove from oven, pour cream over vegetables and serve at once.

Baked Ham Slice With Fruit.

Submitted by Miss Frances Moseley,
Standard Bldg.,
Atlanta, Ga.

1 1/2 slice cured ham
1-3 cup brown sugar
Juice of 1-2 lemon
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
8 figs, canned or fresh
4 slices canned pineapple
Cherries, optional

Spread ham slice with brown sugar, reserving 2 tablespoons. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter. Simmer figs, if fresh, until soft and drain. Place ham in baking dish, surround with figs and pineapple, sprinkled with lemon juice. Spread with remaining brown sugar and dot with remaining butter. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, 25 to 30 minutes. Serve on platter surrounded by fruits, garnished with cherries.

Best Tomato Sandwiches.

Submitted by
Mrs. R. L. Miller Sr.,
150 King Avenue,
Athens, Ga.

Use tomatoes of medium size. Peel, slice thin. Peel white onion, slice thin, and place one slice onion on top of each tomato slice. Leave in refrigerator 1 hour. Slice and trim bread and spread each slice generously with mayonnaise. Remove onion slices from tomatoes, sprinkle tomato slices with salt and place them between slices of bread. (The onion stays on tomato long enough to give flavor.)

Pineapple Ice Box Cake.

Submitted by
Mrs. Howard Parshall,
Box 1902,
Fort Benning, Ga.

Crust.

2 eggs
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon lemon extract
1-2 cup boiling water

Beat egg yolks until thick, the whites until stiff. Into yolks stir half of the sugar, the other half into the whites. Fold together, then add flour, sifted with baking powder, then the flavoring and last add the boiling water. The batter is very thin. Bake in two layers or in shallow pan and divide for two layers.

Filling.

4 egg yolks
1-2 cup sugar
1-4 cup water

Combine these, place in double boiler, cook until thick and set aside to cool. Cream 1 cup butter with 2 cups powdered sugar, then add 1 cup drained pineapple. Fold into custard mixture. Add 1 teaspoon lemon extract. But between layers and on top of cake and place in refrigerator. Top with whipped cream, if desired.

A prize of $1 each is awarded for recipes printed in this column every Friday. Address recipes to The Constitution or to Sally Saver, with your name and address written plainly on each sheet.

Ideas From a Cook's Notebook

A delicious sauce for steamed or boiled fish is one made by mixing one-half cup finely chopped cooked beets with three-fourth cup cream whipped until thick but not stiff, 2 or 3 tablespoons lemon juice or equal parts lemon juice and tarragon vinegar, 2 teaspoons sugar and salt to season. Serve cold. This is also a good dressing for fish salad made from any white fish.

Salad plate luncheons are generally popular in tea rooms and restaurants during all the summer season. Why not adopt the same idea for home use? Arrange a substantial salad-fish, cold meat, shrimp and spaghetti, deviled egg, etc.—on a large plate, garnish as desired, add two small hot rolls or biscuits, or a sandwich and serve with any preferred cold or hot beverage. With fruit salad plates, use nut bread sandwich, cream cheese sandwich, toasted cheese sandwiches, etc.

Slice leftover boiled potatoes in fairly thick slices, dip in salad oil or melted butter and broil on the broiler grid along with steak, chops, hamburger, etc. A good substitute for fried potatoes.

Fruit Crumb Pudding.
This is a good summer dessert. Use pitted fresh cherries, or pitted plums, apricots, sliced peaches, blackberries, etc. Arrange alternate layers of the fruit and buttered bread crumbs in a buttered rather shallow baking dish, having two layers each of fruit and crumbs, fruit on bottom and crumbs on top. Sprinkle each layer of fruit with sugar to sweeten. Cover and bake in a moderate oven for about 30 minutes, then uncover and continue cooking long enough to brown the crumbs. Serve warm or cold with cream or a foamy sauce.

The brown sugars are softer than granulated, so, when measuring them, pack them well into the measuring cup to get the required quantity.

Green peas are rich in phosphorus, iron and vitamin C and are a factor in the prevention of pellagra.

Pudding Sauce.
Delicious with custards, gelatin or other desserts is a sauce which combines one-half cup strawberry juice, one cup cream, whipped, and one tablespoon confectioners' sugar (to taste). Beat well.

Frozen Tomato Juice.

Mix 3 cups tomato juice with the juice of half a lemon, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon grated horseradish and 1 tablespoon Drinks made of milk and eggs and delicately flavored with sherry furnish nourishment in light form, and are good for those with finicky appetites.

ILLUSTRIOUS REPORTED TORPEDOED—The British aircraft carrier Illustrious, shown here, has been struck by a torpedo, the German high command announced last night. The German communique gave only bare details of the reported torpedoing.

Jittery Carol Is Considering Abdicating in Favor of Prince

SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 4.—(AP)—King Carol was described in diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest tonight as nervously confiding to his intimates his uncertainty over abdicating in favor of his son, 18-year-old Prince Mihai.

These dispatches, written by high foreign diplomats in the Rumanian capital, said the king had gone sleepless for four days, smoking cigarettes chain-fashion, pacing the floor continuously and going unshaven.

They said he was completely broken up by the loss of Bessarabia and Bucovina.

The monarch was described as having told his close friends that he was seriously considering abdication because he felt he, personally, would be held responsible for the loss of territories to Soviet Russia and the consequent shaky position of his kingdom.

French Protest To U. S. About British Attack

Bullitt Asked To Tell F. D. R. in Hope He Will Use Influence.

BERLIN, July 4.—(AP) by Radio) A dispatch from Vichy, France, said tonight that French Foreign Minister Badoin had received United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt and informed him "in words of the utmost indignation and strongest protest" of the British naval attack on the French fleet off Oran.

He asked that the French government's point of view be conveyed to President Roosevelt, the dispatch said, adding: "French circles apparently hope that Roosevelt will use the moral and political influence of the United States on Britain in order to prevent further British attacks contrary to international law."

Another dispatch from Vichy said the French government would meet tonight to censure the British naval action and to approve the attitude of the French naval commander, Vice Admiral Gensoul, in resisting Premier Marshal Petain will reply to today's speech of British Prime Minister Churchill, defining France's future attitude toward Britain.

Meanwhile, war-broken France moved grimly toward reorganization of its political structure on enforced "modern" lines.

The new regime of iron will be characterized by its powerful executive branch, an entirely new constitution, and a parliament designed to function with the minimum of talk.

A statement published tonight said Petain had definitely decided to break away from "routine formalism" and inaugurate drastic reforms which will extend to the very fundamentals of the nation's life.

They will be designed to eliminate "internal quarrels, political fussing and interminable discussions in parliament."

Sister Carter Marries Amid Cheering Flock

Police Whistles Blow, Bridesmaid Is Lost at Wedding.

By BILL HART.

Sister Ricie Inez Carter became a bride yesterday.

And were he alive, the mighty Barnum himself would take off his hat and humbly bow down before her. For it was a show that would have made jealous the greatest showman that ever lived. And it was all staged by Sister Ricie.

She conceived it, executed it, and played the leading role. Of course there was a husband, Crawford Clark. But for the crowd of 1,000 shouting, laughing and applauding followers of Sister Ricie there was only one leading character.

Done according to the best tradition of the sawdust trail, it was staged beneath canvas at the Four Square Gospel church, Washington street and Memorial drive.

For more than a year now Sister Ricie has been bringing souls to Christ there in the best manner of her teacher—Aimee Semple McPherson. But last Sunday the congregation received the greatest shock of its life when Sister Ricie announced she was to become a wife.

And last night the deed was done.

Packed Arena.

The gospel tent seats only 300. But at 7 o'clock, 30 minutes before the ceremony, nearly 700 people packed the sawdust arena.

At 7:30, when the bride arrived, another 300 had jammed inside. Everything was ready—except that the bride and groom couldn't get inside.

Finally, amidst a burst of applause, the groom made his way to the altar at the far end of the tent. The piano struck up "Here Comes the Bride."

Led by her bridesmaids, Sister Ricie tried to get into the center aisle. She couldn't. She tried again. After five minutes that was given up as hopeless, and she moved to another aisle.

And then a bridesmaid got lost. Everybody looked. She couldn't be found.

"Let's go," said Sister Ricie. And pushing valiantly, she moved five feet. Again the piano started up. Again it stopped. The groom glanced nervously around, searching for his bride.

For the third time the piano started. And finally Sister Ricie got to the altar, backed by a large American flag. Pandemonium broke loose.

Police Whistles.

Cries of "Hurrah," mingled with "How about sitting down?" Then the law swung into action. Two police whistles screeched and finally quiet was restored—at least something approaching quiet.

At last the ceremony began. No

Daylight Robbery Nets Pair $143

Two negroes, in broad daylight late yesterday afternoon, entered Brown's liquor store at 71 Currier street, bound and gagged the manager, R. N. Thackston, and escaped with $143, City Detectives H. E. Burdette and J. E. Helms reported last night.

Thackston told police that as the two negroes walked into the store one of them hit him with his fist, knocking him down, after which they tied and bound him. He said he did not know if they were armed.

Old Mexican land grants made before the United States took over California are recognized as legal.

Decatur Commissioners To Hold Meeting Tonight

City commissioners of Decatur will meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the municipal building for a routine business session and the semi-annual report.

Mrs. Mortie H. Christian, clerk, will report on an increase in building permits and tax collections, which already exceed the collections made up to this point last year.

Plane Engine Manufacture At High Point

Scarcity of New Tools Is Limiting Factor, Plant Chief Says.

By JOSEPH S. EDGERTON.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. EAST HARTFORD, Conn., July 4.—Aircraft engine production will not constitute a bottleneck in American national defense plans, but can be made to keep pace with virtually any warplane construction program the nation wants to undertake, according to surveys now being completed in the light of current emergency here and abroad.

Asserting that there is more real danger of bottlenecks developing in the emergency production of such items as tanks, antiaircraft guns, antitank guns and similar equipment than in the aircraft engine supply, leaders of the nation's two great military aviation engine plants pointed out that their production has been tremendously stepped up during recent months and is expected to expand just about as rapidly as aircraft can be produced and pilots and mechanics trained.

Rapid Increase.
The great Pratt & Whitney aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation here has increased its actual production of engines of military airplane sizes five times in less than a year; will increase its production 7 1/2 times within the next three months and will have increased the number of engines actually turned out by 1,000 per cent within another nine months.

The Wright Aeronautical Corporation, Paterson, N. J., is almost paralleling the Pratt & Whitney development. During the past year Wright has more than doubled its productive capacity and has increased its production 7 1/2 times within the next three months and will have increased the number of engines actually turned out by 1,000 per cent within another nine months.

Tools Needed.
Wright has just completed the last of a number of plant expansions, the latest construction adding approximately 600,000 square feet of floor place and increasing the total area by about 25 per cent. Machine tools for the new section have been on order for some months; deliveries now are being made and the additional space is expected to be in full production by September or October.

The limiting factor in future large-scale aircraft engine plant expansion will be the inability to obtain new machine tools quickly, in the opinion of Guy W. Vaughan, president of Wright Aeronautical Corporation.

"We may have to have the co-operation of the federal government in obtaining machine tools," Vaughan explained. "I feel confident that the aircraft engine plants, possibly with a little help in this direction, are going to be able to take care of as much actual production as the government will want to authorize."

Four Types.
Vaughan said that in order to speed up production, Wright will concentrate on four types of engines.

It also was disclosed for the first time that Pratt & Whitney also is limiting its production to four types, at least during the period of the present emergency. The world-famous Pratt & Whitney series of hornet engines has been discontinued and the big East Hartford plant has dropped all models except the wasp junior, the wasp, the twin wasp and the double wasp. These engines are adequate for the powering, respectively, of primary training airplanes, advanced trainers, pursuit and other smaller combat types, and the heavy bombardment airplanes.

The two larger models, the twin and double wasps, are 14-cylinder radial air-cooled engines of a high degree of efficiency for military purposes, with a weight of about 1,375 pounds per horsepower and takeoff outputs of 1,050 and 1,200 horsepower.

The Wright engines remaining in production correspond pretty generally in size, horsepower and use with the P. & W. models now on the line.

Small Production.
All of the Wright and the Pratt & Whitney engines now in production are air-cooled radials. Only one other American manufacturer today is producing aircraft engines suitable for combat aircraft and the third type is a liquid-cooled engine of far smaller frontal area than the big air-cooled engines. It is produced by the Allison Engineering Company, Indianapolis, one of the General Motors group.

Despite the fact that General Motors, with all its background of automobile engine production, has been working a year at full speed to get the Allison engine in shape for production, and despite previous experience in aircraft engine production, the Allison still is on a very limited production basis of 14 a week or less.

The chief reason for delay in getting the Allison engine into production is the experimental character of the engine and the second reason is the inability of a factory equipped with automobile machine tools to take over the far more precise work required on an aircraft engine of 10 times the horsepower and infinitely less relative weight.

Expressing frank doubts that the United States government will actually attempt to undertake a 50,000-airplane program, leading Teachers, Lawyers, Salesmen To Swap Civilian Clothes for Khaki.

Like warhorses sniffing the battle afar off, 300 business and professional men—teachers, lawyers and salesmen from throughout the southeast—next Monday will swap their gabardine suits and white buckskin shoes for the khaki of Uncle Sam's army and a 30-day training period as members of the Citizen's Military Training Corps at Fort McPherson.

The whole of Monday will be turned over to physical examinations, for Uncle Sam is in earnest about getting his civilian soldiers in shape and a man with a murmuring heart won't be able to stand the gaff.

The next day, Tuesday, with everybody in uniform and ready to go, the regular training program will begin, with a bugle rousing the trainees up at 5:30 in the morning, and calisthenics and drill following. The afternoon will be turned over to proper ceremonies of dedication.

Taking part in these will be Lieutenant Colonel Clifford R. Jones, camp commander, who will make the opening address; Governor Rivers, Mayor Hartsfield, John M. Slaton, former Governor of Georgia and civilian aide to the fourth corps area, and civilian aides from eight states in the corps area.

These include W. L. Spencer, Montgomery, Ala.; B. C. Riley, Gainesville, Fla.; Edgar B. Dunlap, Gainesville, Ga.; James M. Thomson, New Orleans, La.; Alexander Fitz-Hugh, Vicksburg, Miss.; J. W. Harrelson, Raleigh, N. C.; McDavid Horton, Columbia, S. C., and Alexander Guerry, Sevanee, Tenn.

Major Bernard F. Hurles, post commander at Fort McPherson, will speak of the purpose of the camp, and the Governor and mayor will deliver the official welcome. The Rev. Herman L. Turner, chaplain-major in the national guard, will pronounce the invocation and benediction and the 8th infantry band will play.

Professions listed among those enrolled include lawyers, teachers, newspapermen, farmers, restaurant managers, department store officials, corporation executives, hotel managers, druggists, advertising men and state and federal employees.

Talmadge Says He'll Pay State Debt, Cut Costs

Ex-Governor Does Not Mention Personalities in Albany Speech.

By L. A. FARRELL, Special Correspondent.

ALBANY, Ga., July 4.—Promising to pay the state out of debt and slash overhead expenses to provide funds for old-age pensions and the common schools, Eugene Talmadge today launched his campaign for a third term as governor of Georgia.

Favored by sunshine in Dougherty county while nearly every other county was being visited by torrential rains, the former Governor addressed a large crowd in Albany's American Legion park with the radio carrying the speech to the rest of the state.

Talmadge's speech was devoid of personalities. He didn't mention any of the four opposing candidates by name and when he attacked the present administration he didn't mention the name of any officials of the government. Several times the former Governor was halted by questioners in his crowd who sought to ask him about phases of his campaign. One questioner asked him about the old charge that he had called CCC members "bums and loafers," a charge which Talmadge again denied today.

Asks About Pardons.

Another questioner asked him about charges made against him for pardons granted during his previous administrations.

"Of course I heard a large number of clemency applications," Talmadge responded. "Many of these were granted. Perhaps I made a few mistakes, but these were more than balanced by the fact that I made many hearts warm through clemency rightfully granted."

Talmadge added that "the face of one man I failed to turn out today is the largest in the history of any Talmadge campaign." He added that Talmadge leaders were "more than gratified" by the turnout. Banners showing delegations from more than 40 counties were spotted throughout the crowd.

Introduces Talmadge.

Representative Delacey Allen, of Dougherty county, former state commander of the American Legion, introduced Talmadge. Allen attacked the present state administration and declared "the race for Governor of Georgia this year begun and ended the day Eugene Talmadge qualified as a candidate."

Mayor W. B. Haley, of Albany, made a short address of welcome to Talmadge and other visitors.

Essential points of the speech follow:

"While I was Governor of Georgia, free textbooks were first inaugurated in the state, and I signed a voucher for free textbooks in the first six grades in our public schools.

"When I went in as Governor of Georgia, there was an outstanding indebtedness to the teachers of the state for salaries past due for as long as six years. This indebtedness to the teachers of Georgia was paid in full.

"While I was Governor of Georgia, the schools ran the entire term, and the teachers were paid promptly each month.

"There is a past due indebtedness to the teachers of Georgia now that has accumulated during the past three years.

"There is a past due indebtedness to the county school boards, and municipal boards for the schools due by the state of Georgia.

"There is a past due indebtedness to the county school boards and to our teachers will be paid in full if I am your governor, by the first of March, 1941.

Full Term for Schools.

"If I am Governor, the schools will run the full term while I am in office, and the school teachers will be paid promptly each month.

"I pledged to the people of Georgia in 1932 to cut out useless extravagance in the State Highway Department, and to put the money on the roads and bridges. This was done, and during the four years that I was in the Governor's chair more roads and bridges were built in Georgia and paid for than have ever been built and paid for in eight years of any other time in our road history.

"We are going to cut the Highway Department down to where they will have room to work over there. Too many engineers, line-men, supervisors inspectors and clerks in any department eat up the money, and no results are shown.

"In 1932, I told the people of Georgia that our light and power rates were too high; that our telephone rates were too high, that our transportation rates were too high.

"I did not stop at telling you this. After I was elected Governor of Georgia, you saw these rates reduced from 15 to 40 per cent, leaving in the people's pockets over $10,000,000 per year.

One License Charge.

"If I am your Governor, we will wipe out the license where a family owns a car and will let those who are of the ability and age to drive it when it is bought, and one license charge will cover for that car."

"While I was Governor, taxes were reduced, and all of the outstanding indebtedness of the state, exclusive of the bonds, was paid in full. This amounted to over $11,000,000.

"After reducing the ad valorem tax 40 per cent and reducing other taxes, the debt of the state was paid, and when I walked out of the Governor's office, over $11,000,000 was left in the state treasury."

"Write Tom Wisdom, who was state auditor, not only Talmadge was Governor, but when Russell and Hardeman were Governor—and while Rivers was Governor—and see what he says about the money that was left in the treasury when I walked out of the governor's office.

"Where are we today? Practically $6,000,000 due the educational department of the state.

"Where will we be on July 1, 1941? Not only is the cash balance of four years ago gone, but we will be facing a state indebtedness of practically $50,000,000.

"What caused it? Waste, extravagance, red tape, putting up buildings without the authority of the law to hire more people to cut red tape, and add on more expense.

Charges Counties Crippled.

"What is the condition of our counties? The administration for the past three and one-half years has crippled them to where most of the counties are in debt. What are we going to do?

"Are we going to abolish our counties? Are we going to consolidate them?

"Not if Talmadge is your governor. Our county system is the best safeguard of local self-government—the foundation of true democracy.

"What are we going to do to help them? If Talmadge is your governor, we will help the counties by giving them additional contracts to maintain the highways of our state. The counties must have their road machinery. With this road machinery, they can maintain our highways cheaper than the state can do it, and at the same time it will help the counties finance their burdens."

"A sales tax creates thousands of additional jobs for inspectors, and you know, a sales tax is collected by the state. If it is written into law, look out, and goodbye counties."

"If I am your governor, all of the useless overhead in the Welfare Department will be cut out, and the pension money will go to the old folks, as provided by the law.

State Revenue Increase.

"The total revenue for the state of Georgia has increased per year from $32,000,000 to $59,000,000 since Talmadge walked out of the governor's office.

"If properly administered, the present taxes of Georgia can carry out every function of our government."

"If I am your governor, the natural resources of our state will

Jupiter Pluvius Proves Unkind To Georgia's Political Rallies

Jupiter Pluvius didn't look with favor on Georgia's political campaign antics yesterday.

He sent rain all over the state and, while none of the meetings was halted, one—the Hugh Howell opening at Ellaville—was forced inside by a heavy downpour.

The other meetings—Eugene Talmadge's at Albany and Columbus Roberts' at Blue Ridge—saw their attendance cut by the rain.

Talmadge was the luckiest of the three. It rained all around his meeting site but not a drop fell in the immediate vicinity.

Ellaville Crowd Hears Howell Flay Opponents

Talmadge, Nix, Deen and Roberts Called Rivers' Supporters.

By LUKE GREENE, Staff Writer.

ELLAVILLE, Ga., July 4.—Hugh Howell, the stormy Petrel of Georgia politics, plunged vigorously into his campaign for Governor here today by labeling his four opponents as supporters of the Rivers administration, which he charged was a blot on the fair name of Georgia.

Speaking to a throng of Independence Day celebrants, who crowded into the courthouse of this usually quiet Georgia town, home of the late Charlie McCrory, who initiated the fight for free school books, Howell minced no words in attacking his opponents, frequently calling them by name.

Although the rain forced the crowd to move inside, it did not dim the enthusiasm of the staunch residents of this section, who applauded him time and time again.

The political gathering was followed by a fish fry.

Foes Support Rivers.

Referring to Eugene Talmadge, Abit Nix, Columbus Roberts, and Braswell Deen, Howell declared that these four men, who supported Rivers in 1938, are not only running against me for Governor in 1940, but each and every one of them is trying to run on my platform.

The speaker was introduced by the Rev. C. D. Carter, of Ellaville, Baptist preacher and clerk of the court. Senator C. C. Williamson, of Ellaville, acted as master of ceremonies.

Others speaking briefly were the Rev. W. S. Johnson, who led in prayer; Milton Fleetwood, of Cartersville, former president of the Georgia Press Association; Will Overstreet, of Wadley; Ben Neal, of Montezuma, and W. J. Crocker, commander of the American Legion post at Unadilla.

Howell leveled much of his fire at Talmadge, one time his close political ally who opened his campaign only 40 miles away at Albany. In 1938, Howell said Talmadge, who was running for the United States senate, received only seven more votes than Rivers in Talmadge's home county of Telfair.

"What do you suppose happened after Gene Talmadge carried his home county of Telfair for Ed Rivers back in 1938?" he asked. "I'll tell you what happened, just how Gene was paid off for carrying Telfair county for Rivers. Gene's son, Herman, was given a job by Ed Rivers and Herman Talmadge accepted the job. However, the payoff was too plain. Gene knew the people of Georgia saw through it all, so he made Herman quit the job in short order in the hope his fellow Georgians would forget it by this time."

Singled Out Deen.

Howell also singled out Deen as a target, asserting that Mr. Deen is so imbued with the idea of high salaries that he is actually running for Governor on a platform of raising salaries. Howell charged that the overhead in the State Welfare Department of which Deen is director was too high during his last campaign.

Flaying the Rivers administration, Howell said his four opponents who worked for Rivers' reelection two years ago, and now they were opposing him on the same platform he (Howell) used receive special attention from a man who loves the good earth.

"The governor of Georgia is the last back-stop for the people. No decision or no action is called on by the governor until that same question has passed every other official.

"When anything reaches the Governor, it is something like the short-stop on the baseball field. It comes to him hot. The Governor can dodge if he will, but the people suffer.

"If I am your governor, when it comes back to me, I won't dodge. It will be hot, and whatever I do, I will have critics on both sides, but the great number of people in Georgia who have no interest except an honest government will know that Gene was in the play."

Constitution want ads are the things that put the "kick" in the spring tonic.

Roberts Asks 'New Deal' for State Farmers

Launches Gubernatorial Drive Before Blue Ridge Crowd.

By FRANK DRAKE, Staff Writer.

BLUE RIDGE, Ga., July 4.—The mountains of north Georgia surrounding Blue Ridge resounded to Fourth of July political oratory and the music of hillbilly bands today as Columbus Roberts, commissioner of agriculture, launched his campaign for Governor amid hurrahing holiday crowds.

The town square was filled with people from a dozen northern counties as Roberts called for a new deal for farmers and farm women, and declared that Georgia never can be really prosperous until the products of the rural sections are sold continually at fair prices.

The commissioner, starting out his fight for the governorship after three and one-half years as head of the State Agriculture Department, denounced "bayonet rule" for Georgia and promised a calm, businesslike administration of state affairs if elected.

Repeatedly Cheered.

He was cheered again and again as he told the 2,000 persons gathered under big oak trees that as commissioner he had inherited debts totaling $85,000 but had ended the fiscal year July 1 with $136,000 in the treasury.

His speech highlighted a day filled with activity here, including boat races, auto races, a double-header ball game, a hillbilly band and fiddling contest, and a free barbecue. William Butts, of Blue Ridge, welcomes the visitors for the town.

Also speaking here today were three candidates for congressman from the ninth district seeking to succeed B. Frank Whelchel, Dr. J. S. Golden, J. Fred Kelley and Herman De La Perriere.

Roberts nailed down each plank of his platform with concise words as he fired the first barrage in his battle for votes.

"The big question in Georgia today is whether our democracy can be preserved by democratic processes," he declared. "Georgia never again wants to see soldiers in her capital, or her citizens—men and women, herded like cattle behind barbed wire fences and guarded by bayonets, as they were under the administration of a Governor who now asks you to send him back to the statehouse. If that sort of thing is allowed, the next step would be the collection of taxes at the point of a bayonet."

No Name-Calling.

The commissioner, without calling names, condemned the use of the military to oust public officials, as both former Governor Talmadge and Governor Rivers have done. He said he would keep whatever highway chairman was in office even if appointed by his predecessor.

He struck at some of his opponents for the Governor's chair by pointing out they were "just now" coming out for President Roosevelt and the national administration. "I didn't have to come out for Roosevelt or for old age pensions, or for better health service, or for other worthy things the people of Georgia need and should have. I've been for them all along," he asserted.

The speaker called for "a purge from our midst of those who believe that government is an avenue to private gain."

Adding he sought no personal gain from the office of Governor, he added "I don't propose to surround myself with people who expect to get rich out of 'taxpayers' money'.

Recounts Advances.

Roberts recounted the advances made in the Agriculture Department under his administration, and promised to put other departments, namely, the Highway Department, on the same business-like, non-political basis.

"We are going to eliminate waste and inefficiency and other evils wherever we find them," he averred.

He promised the needy will be helped by this elimination of waste and extravagance and announced his program favors the seven months' school term, pay and back pay for teachers, free school books, and equal opportunities for both boys and girls for both grade and high school education.

Planning to give a specific program of financial reform for the state later, Roberts today asserted that the state has got to get its finances on a firm foundation.

Staggering Debt.

"What Georgia actually owes runs into a staggering sum," Roberts declared, asserting that on January 1 the state will face its greatest financial crisis. "But we have got to do something about it. We can't go on forever robbing Peter to pay Paul—taking money from one department to keep another department going."

He said he will prepare a program to put the state on a sound business basis for submission to the legislature.

A good word for the women came from Roberts, too. "When I'm Governor, I expect to do everything in my power to advance the interest of our women and give them better representation on our boards and other places where their talents may be used for the state," he said.

The gubernatorial aspirant said that his election would automatically end the "pardon racket" and all other "rackets." He recalled that "we've heard a whole lot in previous administrations."

The commissioner devoted a good part of his brief talk to an outline of advantages which should be obtained for the youth of the state through educational opportunities.

Juvenile Home Takes Bad Boys, Reclaims Them

Committee Feels State Should Relieve County of Task.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Social erosion can be stopped, just as soil erosion can be stopped. There is such a thing as human reclamation, just as there is reclamation of the soil.

A boy who is growing up gnarled and twisted in his character can be straightened out, just as a warped and twisted tree, when handled young, can be trained to grow up straight.

Make Good Citizens.

These things are the job of Fulton county's white industrial home, where juvenile delinquents who get in trouble with the law are trained, not punished, under discipline that is not for the purpose of keeping them from society, but for the purpose of returning them to society as good citizens.

Some of them are bad because they are sick. Figures recently released by Ira H. Dodd, young superintendent of the home, show that 25 of the home's personnel suffered from diseases of the eyes. Many were suffering from dental ills. One was tubercular, and another was the victim of a glandular disturbance that required the expert care of Good Samaritan clinic to correct.

Twenty-two were suffering from diseased tonsils that required operation.

Keep Them Busy.

Some were bad because they were the victims of that old Biblical adage of the idle hands being the devil's workshop. They knew how to do nothing. They had nothing to do. To remedy this, there are trained experts to teach skills. There is W. H. Maxwell, head of the modern carpentry shop; L. J. Pirle, who teaches farming and canning; Mrs. Jessie Norris, academic instructor; Mrs. Marie A. Coons, academic principal; and Mrs. W. C. Dameron, head of the laundry and teacher of sewing.

These people are qualified, trained for their tasks. The county has done its best, in recent months, to bring the school up to standard. Yet the operation of such a school, a committee which pondered the problem has decided, is not properly the function of the county. The state, with its wider resources, should take over the training of these juveniles.

Old Methods Gone.

At its training school for boys at Milledgeville the state has had 35 years of experience in such training. Admittedly, for 32 of these 35 years it was a hopelessly neglected institution, with competent teachers handicapped by parsimonious appropriations.

All that is now changed. During the past three years Georgia's training of delinquents has come up to a par with that of any state. Old shacks that formerly housed juveniles have been torn down and modern buildings have been erected. Georgia's appropriation for the maintenance of its training school for the past three years has been adequate.

Fulton county is going ahead as best it can with its limited resources. It is doing a good job, with what it has to do with. But the state could do a better job. The state is better equipped. The county's youth which needs guidance needs the best it can be given. Before another year is gone, the state should have assumed the burden that rightfully belongs to it—that it is now, for the first time in many decades, equipped to assume.

Memphis Gambler Given Life Imprisonment Term

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 4.—(P) Bulky Bob Berryman, 52-year-old Memphis gambler whose night clubs operate in Mississippi, was sentenced to life imprisonment today for the beer-tavern slaying May 31 of John Phillips, a night club bouncer.

After an all-night recess, the jury met early this morning and deliberated throughout the day before returning a verdict of "guilty" of first degree murder with mitigating circumstances.

Bank Opens On Fourth, Keeps Depositors' Faith

STONEWALL, Okla., July 4.—(P)—The Case State Bank was the only bank in Oklahoma—and probably in the nation—doing business today. Here's why: President P. S. Case, 65, was forced to close his First State Bank a few weeks ago after an employee embezzled $35,000. Case raised $25,000 capital and reopened today under a new charter. No depositor of the old bank lost a cent. "Why, I'd open even if it was Sunday," Case declared.

Doctors Show Lack of Oxygen In Brain Fatal

When Gas Runs Low, Life Is Endangered, Exhibit Reveals.

By THOMAS R. HENRY.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. NEW YORK, July 4.—Oxygen starvation of the brain is the cause of many deaths hitherto blindly ascribed to blood clots hitting vital centers during surgical operations.

This was shown before the American Medical Association here today in a series of demonstrations of the unsuspected dangers of allowing the fire of life to burn too low for any extended period.

The condition is known as anoxia. It now is becoming apparent, it was shown in an exhibit by Drs. Albert and Moses Behrend and Helena F. Riggs, of Philadelphia, that it is widespread in the population, probably the cause of many vague illnesses, and a constant danger whenever a patient is brought to the operating table.

Anemic Condition.

It is a constant condition, they pointed out, in anemia when there is a scarcity of the red blood cells whose primary job is to carry oxygen, in heart maladies where that organ is unable to pump sufficient blood, and at high altitudes where there is not enough oxygen in the air. It also is frequent in cases of vitamin B and C deficiencies and in acute alcoholism, when the cells lack the sparks to ignite the oxygen which is brought to them.

In such cases the oxygen is just sufficient to keep life's fires smoldering. When there is a quick reduction in the already inadequate supply, death is the result. The worst offenders are pain-killing drugs such as morphine, the Philadelphia doctors said.

When the oxygen in the blood is cut below the minimum limit, they pointed out, the first to suffer is the brain, the torch of the body, which normally requires as much as 30 per cent more of this gas of life than any other organ. One of the first indications is excessive thirst. Convulsions may follow, with permanent damage to the brain cells. The end result is coma and death.

Oxygen Content.

In surgery, they urged, physicians should first determine the oxygenation state of the patient. This now can be accomplished quickly by an instrument known as the oxymeter, which records the transmission of light through some translucent tissue. It is essential, they pointed out, that patients with an oxygen deficiency be treated with heavy doses of vitamins before an operation and also that an anesthetic be used with which a lot of oxygen can be combined.

There is grave danger, it was stressed, in the use of excessive amounts of pain-killing drugs in childbirth. Many of these interfere with cell oxidation. The unborn child depends for its oxygen on the blood stream of the mother. It also is an extremely sensitive organism for which nature seems to have afforded a barely sufficient supply. The result of any sharp oxygen reduction is either to cause the death of the infant or to bring about irreparable damage to the developing cells of the brain.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 5, 1940.

Georgia's Fourth

Georgia's Fourth of July generally was made bleak by a rainfall which spared little of the state. It fell on picnics, camp meetings and politicians, moving some to say the old adage about rain falling on the just and the unjust ably was demonstrated.

Automobile races, golf matches, picnics, fishing trips and outings for the family all suffered cancellations or severe restrictions.

The net result was that Georgia set a new Fourth of July record for safety. Aiding the rain was the state's efficient highway patrol, which had worked out a special patrol plan to keep down speeders and reckless drivers.

Old Salem camp ground, where some 10,000 would have gathered for the day's program, featuring Dr. George Truett, world-famous Baptist minister and religious teacher, was all but isolated by newly graded roads, turned into quagmires by the heavy rainfall of Saturday and Sunday morning. Dr. Truett delivered his Fourth of July address to about 1,000 persons who filled the Covington High school gymnasium.

They heard him say that the World War did not prove that Christianity had failed, but did prove everything else had failed except Christianity. Treaties, leagues, diplomats, politicians and business and commerce all failed in their efforts to avert war, he said. Meanwhile, he said, the figure of Jesus Christ stands in the market place of the world, waiting until the world shall try Christianity as a means of averting war.

In south and north Georgia candidates for state offices shouted their political wares to crowds of varying size. The rain thinned some of the crowds. At least, those with thin crowds hoped it was rain.

Basket lunches, prepared for camp meetings, picnics and outings, were eaten at home or between showers along roadsides. It was a sorrowful day for children.

Brightest feature of the day was the Declaration of Independence, read at some of the meetings of the day. It comes down through the years, courageous and true.

Happiest of all it were internes and ambulance men, who had fewer bones to set, wounds to sew up.

Pleasing To Read

In all the turmoil of a world reflected in the daily news columns, it is pleasing to read, now and then, of some human undertaking that sounds normally abnormal, as it were.

For instance, we read that one man and two women have started, in an 11-ton auxiliary boat, the 6,000-mile sea trip from Nova Scotia to Vancouver. They ran into a sandbar before out of the harbor, it is true, but easily freed their craft and proceeded along the watery way.

Possibly, for their own peace of mind, there is no radio on their little vessel. For what is the sense in an evident effort to "get away from it all," if the constant reports on battle and defeat and sudden death are to continue pouring in to further stun ears already horror numbed?

There is unusual risk in such a stunt voyage at this time, however. Suppose, calling for water and supplies at some Latin American port, they are taken for a new variety of "Fifth Column" or, possibly, the advance guard of some subtly new mode of Nazi invasion? Or suppose they run smack into the middle of some array of warships engaged in secret maneuvers or movements? Or suppose a strange submarine suddenly lifts out of the ocean to the starboard?

The possibilities are numerous. Still, for the sake of daring souls the world over, all adventurers will wish them bon voyage and a safe arrival in Vancouver—further from Europe out closer to Japan.

Norman Thomas has run for borough president, mayor, governor, congressman, senator and President. And, we are forced to conclude, for fun.

With no machine, no support in the party and no professional advice, Willkie may be the Kipling character who traveled the fastest when traveling alone.

A party planner tells the G. O. P. to get an idea; then go after votes. But why put luxuries ahead of the necessities of political life?

Suffer Little Children

The plight of the children of England is spotlighted on this page in today's Capital Parade. Perhaps too few Americans have thought of the problem. None yet know of the horror of air raids, of the limitless burden today's generations have placed upon those who now are helpless in the face of an onslaught that was more vicious than any ever known.

It is imperative the United States slash red tape, send ships at least to the Irish coast and provide for the thousands upon thousands of little children the British dominions cannot give haven and whom British ships cannot carry. These are the children of our peoples. They are the helpless ones of earth. By our strength and only by our strength can they be saved for the future, when they will be strong; when those who now are strong will be helpless ones. The aged, most of the women, must be left. There on that Bastion of Britain they must make their stand. But God forbid that the little ones remain. Yet remain they must if Americans are not strong enough and compassionate enough to do more than indulge in meaningless talk, if the British bumble and bungle. Their stay would be only for the duration of the war.

It is not the fight of these children. It is the fight of their fathers, who were not strong enough. They cannot be left to face the merciless, faceless men of the skies. The strength that is ours must be given them, quickly. It will be easy to say that they are not our charges. That their fathers failed. It will be time then to recall the words of the Nazarene: "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of them is the Kingdom of Heaven."

The Life Line of the Country

All who remember the difficulties of moving vast quantities of needed war supplies during the early days of the first World War learned with interest this week that the railroads today are prepared to handle any volume of freight without delay "should emergency come."

Speaking at Kennesaw Mountain Robert Selph Henry, assistant to the president of the American Railroad Association, described the preparations of the railroads today, and his words were distinctly heartening. It was perhaps symbolic that his explanations were made at Kennesaw on the anniversary of the Battle of Kennesaw Mountain, the scene of the decisive battle which enabled the Union forces of General Sherman to advance on Atlanta and sever the chief communication lines north and south, east and west, of the Confederate army. Sherman has been termed the first modern general—his strategy for those days was as startling as the German concept of warfare today—and by his concentration on the destruction of major supply lines and centers sealed the doom of the hard-pressed southerners.

Mr. Henry described the chaos that followed the entrance of the United States into conflict in 1917 and then detailed the new plans laid in co-operation with the War Department for the movement of equipment and supplies in the event of a national emergency, whether one of combat or of disaster.

It should be remembered that in a time of war this country's virtual life blood would be the railroads. Despite the inroads of trucks, water transportation and air transport into the province of the railroad, it still would be impossible for these other agencies to even approach meeting the requirements of a modern army. For that reason the continued building and revitalization of the railroads, no matter what the cost, is imperative. Mr. Henry ably threw the spotlight on one of the foremost considerations of national defense, a consideration often overlooked by the general public.

The Moral of the Story—

Long an object of disdain—and, paradoxically, respect—is the skunk, that lovely-looking creature with the backfire mechanism out-dodged only by a field of rotten cabbage.

But a skunk in full possession of his rightful faculties is one of the most treasured employees of the state of New York and might well be of many another state and thousands of private individuals. He is established in his domain at the Saratoga tree nursery of New York's conservation department. His food—comparable to steak and French fried for the human being—consists of grubs. And being turned loose as sole grubber at the world's largest tree production plant means three squares a day. Employees at the nursery are fully cognizant of his value to the state and treat him with extreme courtesy. But, after all, who wouldn't?

If we may be pardoned for pointing a moral, let it be said that even the most maligned of all our fellow creatures, be they man or beast, has his niche, his little place where he and perhaps he alone may do good.

Editorial of the Day

(From The Charleston News and Courier.)
Henry Ford has refused to manufacture airplane motors in his Detroit plant for the British, but his Canadian company is "using its facilities to the utmost for the defense of the empire." The Canadian munitions minister told the senate in Ottawa that Ford's Canadian company was "beyond criticism," and that it had co-operated completely with the government in filling war orders.

Mr. Ford appears to have conflicting policies. In Canada he builds for the British, but in the United States he won't. He looks upon his properties in Canada as Canadian, with a duty to serve the empire. It looks as if Mr. Ford has drawn a distinction without a difference. The United States is pledged to defend Canada.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—The Fourth of July is usually a day of sweaty parades and ornate oratory, dedicated to the celebration of the independence of the United States. In these terrible times, however, rather than concentrating on our own national glories the orators would do better if they brought to the attention of the people problems like that of the children of England.

The people of England must fight their own battle, with what pitifully little aid this country can give them. Whatever the outcome, the battle will be dreadful, devastating to all the stored-up riches of a great nation, and murderous without distinction to the old and young, the combatants and the non-combatants, the fighting men, the old men, the women and the little children. But if prompt and effective steps can only be taken, the children of England may yet be saved.

TIME IS SHORT

The steps must be taken soon, for the military experts expect the bombing raids over England to reach their full intensity by July 15 and perhaps sooner. And for the steps to be taken at all, the official inertia of the English and American governments must be somehow overcome. As the Gallup poll has already shown, the people of the United States are ready to welcome the children of England. They ought to realize that if the present system is followed, none but a tiny and favored minority of the heirs of our parent nation will be rescued from the fate which perhaps awaits them.

The need is for an immediate mass movement of English children, probably first to Canada, and thence to the homes in the United States where hospitable Americans are ready to welcome them. No such mass movement is now in prospect. Only one English boat a week is bringing refugee children to this country, and only two to Canada. Even these vessels' tragically inadequate accommodations are not fully used. In the first place the English government has not brought home the problem of the children to their people, in the second the American government is still enforcing an immigration system designed not to welcome little children in dire danger of brutal death, but to exclude undesirable aliens.

On the present system, any refugee child must find an American who will take a sworn guaranty to support the child until the age of 16, to give financial references of very substantial kind, and to show some reason, such as friendship with the child's parents, for wishing to undertake the responsibility of the child's care. Unless these prerequisites are met, the child is denied an American visa. Furthermore, unless the child's parents are rich enough to pay the ocean passage the child's guarantors must put up this money also, since the immigration laws forbid the children's passage to be paid by any agency of the English government.

THE SPIRIT OF PILATE?

Naturally, under such a system, only the incredibly fortunate few among the children of England can obtain entry into the United States. Canada cannot receive enough of them to meet the problem; for Canadian resources are too restricted and the Canadian population is too small to absorb a mass exodus. Thus the first step to be taken is the relaxation of the American visa rules. Once they are relaxed, placing the children in this country will be easy. The agencies now desperately attempting to cope with the problem meet daily with such offers as that which came from a New York woman. She asked for 1,500 children. She was told that to assume responsibility for such a little regiment, she would have to guarantee at least $2,000,000. She replied simply, "Well, I've got $2,000,000, and what of it?"

Meanwhile, the shipping problem also needs to be tackled at once. If the English government could send a master of proverbial slowness sufficiently to send as many children as possible for temporary refuge to Canada, they would certainly be allowed entry into the United States in the end. If British shipping facilities are insufficient for the task, the Red Cross has a number of vessels in Europe which have been allowed to enter the combat zone, and could be transformed into transports for some of the children. Some of the neutral shipping now lying idle in American ports might be put in service to bring the children here. And it does not seem too much to ask of congress that American ships be allowed to go to England to bring the children back, whatever the provisions of the neutrality act.

There is one fact to be remembered. Unless there is an appeasement, which seems improbable despite the rumors, the squadrons of Hitler's bombers will soon be raining death all over the British Isles. Whatever their opinions on international affairs, few citizens of the United States will care to decide on the life or death of hundreds of thousands of innocent children in the spirit of Pontius Pilate. The people of America are not the sort to repeat blandly after the procurator of Judea, "We care for none of these things."

The Unheard Speech

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

Mr. Willkie stands on the Republican platform. It is very weak timber on which to stand. The good American earth is firmer.

At the convention I listened for a voice. I listened for a voice which would say what my ears, just one pair of American ears, wanted to hear. If it had spoken, I think it might have been something like this:

Men and Women of the United States of America:

In the gravest days of this republic to make a bid for the leadership of this nation is a serious responsibility. It is a responsibility that no man should lightly seek, and from which, if his soul is awake and aware, he will recoil. Half the world is engaged in a great civil war, testing whether any nation, conceived as ours was in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal, can long endure.

If, therefore, we seek the leadership of the nation in this hour, it must be with humility, and with the earnest dedication to a gigantic task. No man is to be envied who sets his foot upon the path to the White House in these times.

Yet there will be sources of great strength behind him if he lets them get through to him. Those sources of strength are in the myriad souls that are crying out to us: Save America! Let us listen to what they are crying out to us. They are crying, Save America—Save her for the present and for the future. Save her for the purpose for which she was born: the lifting and ennobling of man upon this earth. Preserve her and rebuild her! Keep flying the banner of the brave and the free. Make it the banner of the New World, built by the children of a world in collapse—the Old World. Show us how to use our energies and our resources, our vast unused capital of money and goods and men, our great untapped reserves of energy, that we may make, and make speedily, a paradise for men upon this heart-broken earth, and a paradise that we can defend forever.

This is what the people of the United States are demanding that political leadership should do. This and nothing less is what political leadership must undertake to do. We must liberate the energies of this continent, for regeneration and for defense.

The American nature, the American tradition, the American way, is not to regiment men and resources into a rigid army commanded by party bureaucrats and ununiformed Gestapos. The great American word is Freedom. But it is not our task to free our resources in order that each man may scramble for his own private ends.

We should make it clear that the Communist party will be outlawed under our administration, because it is an instrument of a foreign government; and that the Bund will be outlawed for the same reason. But we should deal legally, but to free them that each individual and each organization may realize themselves as individual players in the great symphony orchestra of a common effort. We should waste little of our energies in this campaign upon re-criminary attacks upon each other, whatever our party may be. Let the dead past bury its dead. None of us is all-wise; none of us has had such foresight that he can be arrogant about the failures of others.

The New Deal, for all its idealism, is inadequate to the tasks at hand and ahead. Let us give credit to its social ideas. But let us not repeat its mistakes, and subject our program to petty paralytic considerations of political preference. Let us not try to keep ourselves in power by trying to buy the American people. We do not need to buy them. We only need to attract them, and show them what to do. They are eager to have their heads and hearts and hands unleashed.

In a few short weeks a world has passed away. We must, therefore, look at ourselves and at our nation and its problems with fresh eyes. Much of what all of us said yesterday is no longer valid, for the premises on which our words and thoughts were based are no longer there.

Yet we were not born today, and though our program and performance must be adapted to a new situation, the things in which we believe, the body of our national faith is more valid than ever in history. Men are still born free and still seek equality and happiness. Government of the people, by the people and for the people is still the hope of this earth. Freedom of speech, of press and of assembly, freedom of enterprise, freedom to own property, freedom to live one's personal life in privacy—all these freedoms have not lost their validity because they have been locked up in concentration camps or trampled into earth by marching men. They live on this soil and they live in millions of hearts everywhere in this unhappy earth. They will live until the last human soul has perished off this globe.

Our party must make it absolutely clear that we shall defend these freedoms, and defend them where they must be defended—against their enemies. These freedoms are instruments to preserve freedom. They must not be turned into instruments by which foreign powers invade our press, our assembly halls and our corporations to divide this nation and plunge it into strife. They must not be used as a means of promoting class hatred and racial fury, letting loose the dogs of war in our midst rather than across the seas.

We should make it clear that the Communist party will be outlawed under our administration, because it is an instrument of a foreign government; and that the Bund will be outlawed for the same reason. But we should deal

Good Morning

By Louie D. Newton.

Talking over the long distance phone with a friend in south Georgia, he said "Now that we are through with this matter, let me ask you to give us in one of your early columns the best story Dr. Truett has used in his sermons up there this week."

The best one? I wouldn't know how to say which has been the best of all these searching and revealing stories that Dr. Truett has brought to bear in his great sermons—stories out of his own experience in trying to bring people on to God. I wouldn't know how to go about saying which is the best one.

But here is one of the great stories:

"I was out for a week's meeting in one of the great rural communities of our southwestern country," said Dr. Truett in his Tuesday morning sermon, "and a man came to me at the close of the service one day and said:

"If you miss me tomorrow you may know that there will be a man here in my place. It is just this, I have a neighbor, a man who has had a hard time of it this year, with much sickness in his family, and his crop is in the grass. He is not a Christian. I have been praying for him, and I am impressed to do my best to bring him under the influence of the Gospel during this meeting. I will be at his house at daybreak in the morning, and I will plow in his place and ask him to come to the meeting and hear you. You'll do your best for him, and remember, every furrow I plow tomorrow I will be praying for that man's salvation, and for you as you preach to him. Preach to him!"

Dr. Truett then told how he glanced about the big audience the next morning to see if he could spot his farmer of the day before. He was not there. That led him to the conclusion he was in the field plowing and that his neighbor was in that meeting.

Upon the invitation for sinners to come and profess their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ," said Dr. Truett, "I saw this big, lanky man in overalls start for the front. Something told me it was the man. Sure enough, by the time he reached me, he was saying, with a deep sob in his voice, 'Sir, I'm here to confess my sins and accept Jesus as my Savior. The best man I ever knew came to my house early this morning and said he would plow in my place today and for me to come along to the meeting and hear you preach. Before I got to the meeting I asked God, for Christ's sake, to forgive this burden of sin which has been on me, and He did. I take Jesus as my Saviour today.'"

And then Dr. Truett brought home to all our hearts the meaning of it all—the fact that there are people all about us who need the Saviour, and who might be brought to the Saviour, if only we cared enough for them. He was preaching from that searching word in the Psalms, "No man can save his soul."

With this problem at the source, and not by persecuting deluded WPA workers.

We should give our oath to the people of the United States that never, while we are in office, will any other flag be carried in our streets, or any uniforms not our own be worn.

We should swear that never will men live in terror because of their race.

The chief reason why the Fifth Column is a menace is because all our own columns are not mobilized, but are seeking their own interests.

The beginning of our defense program is spiritual integration. For twelve hundred years, in victory and in defeat, France has been a great and independent nation. Today France is beaten to her knees.

For more than nine hundred years Great Britain has been a mighty power. Today she is overcome with disaster.

Why has this happened to two great nations? France was beaten in part because she did not have enough machines, but she was also beaten because men dropped their guns upon the fields of battle. Why did they drop their guns and abandon whole mechanized columns? Because their leaders had wasted their energies in petty bickerings; because their leaders loved their own political jobs and their own foreign investments and their own dividends more than they loved the nation. Because their leaders were blind to the social discontent amongst the people. Because of the incredible complacency of those leaders, who up to the last moment were prepared to settle things with a deal.

Let us not make the same mistake.

Let us have, from now on, neither an Old Deal nor a New Deal out a new American Deal.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE GRAND AND GLORIOUS

It seemed to me I heard the rain before I waked. The telephone rang and a lady asked if I would please hurry up the prescription Dr. Blank had ordered. I patiently explained to her I was but a citizen attempting to sleep late on the morning of July 4. And not a pharmacist. It was raining.

I lay there for a while, thinking about the lady who had called, wondering if someone seriously was ill. The morning was unusually quiet, there being no early traffic hurrying toward the city. Some distance away I could hear the petulant crying of a child. The dog scratched at the back door, and barked.

Being alone in the house, I dispensed with certain formalities. Boiling the water, I dripped a quart of coffee, took the coffee pot to a table by the bed, and went back to rest, pouring the coffee as required. A coffee pot, with hot coffee in it, is a comforting thing. The rain dripped down. I was sorry for all the curses being brought down upon the defenseless head of the weatherman who had predicted clouds. It was a blow for the tremendous camp meeting at Old Salem.

For the politicians, it was an alibi. No matter what their crowds are, they would, they may say, have been greater but for muddy roads and rain. The rain affects more than crops.

POLITICAL MUSIC

It is interesting to note two of the political candidates will add to the melodious sound of their own voices the twangy strains of hillbilly music. Texas Governor, "Pass the Biscuits, Pappy," won his race largely on the basis of hillbilly music and a pension plan. This, probably, has inspired the great gain in political music. Most candidates for governor these days, in most any state, carry along more musical accessories than a concert singer. The accessories are not, of course, the same.

Music does not always win races. I recall the first such campaign I ever saw of that type. Indeed, I covered six weeks of it for my paper. Twice, and sometimes thrice, each day I heard the music and the speech. This was 17 years ago.

This was in a campaign by the late Uncle Alf Taylor, a grand old gentleman from "Happy Valley," Tennessee. His brother Bob had been a Democratic governor of Tennessee and Uncle Alf was a Republican governor and seeking a second term. Years before, he and his brother had traveled together, sharing the same room, and opposing one another for governor in the famous "War of the Roses." Their mother had pinned a white rose on one and a red one on the other as they started out in the same buggy. They wore roses every day and old-timers in Tennessee still talk of that campaign. Uncle Alf did not become governor until he was an old man, and his brother Bob long had been in the old graveyard at Happy Valley. Bob had died in Washington, a United States senator.

THE WILY BOB

There are dozens of stories about that "War of the Roses." One evening the two brothers put up at the home of one of Alf's Republican supporters. He was a farmer, working one of the hill farms. East Tennessee has many Republicans to this day.

The wily Bob, the Democrat, got up early that morning before the farmer was up. He slipped down the stairs and out to the barn. There he fed surprised cows and pigs. He carried in wood and filled the kitchen boxes. He got a fire started in the kitchen stove. He drew a fresh bucket of water. He put the coffee on to boil.

When the farmer came down, his morning's work was done. "Please be quiet," said Bob. "I don't want to wake Alf. He likes to sleep late every morning and to have breakfast in bed."

"Well," said the farmer, slowly, looking about and hearing the chores were done, "I'll be danged if I ever thought I'd vote for a Democrat, but I'll be danged if I am going to vote for a Republican that likes his breakfast in bed." (The mountain Republicans are a hardy lot and not to be confused with the breakfast-in-bed Liberty League type.)

As a matter of fact, it was Bob who liked to lie late. But better than anything else, he liked a jest.

"OLD LIMBER"

But, back to the music. Uncle Alf took along a quartet of mountain boys. Three of them were his own sons. The fourth was a neighbor who could sing a man bass.

Uncle Alf took along, too, the most famous fox hound of all time—Old Limber. He was a Walker hound of ancient vintage. The quartet would sing a number of songs to open the program. Old Limber, tied to the leg of a table on the platform, would sleep and wake to snap at flies.

It was quite a campaign. Now and then the old tunes come back into my skull. I heard them at least twice a day for night onto two months. One can become awfully familiar with a song in that time.

It was quite a campaign, but it was a losing one. Uncle Alf was defeated for re-election. The Democrats went back in. There was a matter of taxes and a debt and a few other things.

The candidate must have something else to go with his music. Which, I assume, our own candidates have.

In a Hundred-Yard Dash, the Runner Must Hit Top-Speed At the Start

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Few other experiences are so heart-rending as that of watching the suffering of a loved one you cannot help. And the nervous strain and the feeling of frantic and helpless desperation is intensified if the doctor you depend upon doesn't seem to be doing all that he could. He is doing all he can, of course, but your fears make you unreasonable. This is his job, isn't it? He professes to cure people, doesn't he? Then in mercy's name doesn't he do something?

That same desperate feeling now strains the nerves of people who understand, for they see the life of their country threatened, and this time the physicians are not doing their best, and the people can do nothing but wring their hands and dread the inevitable consequences of inaction and delay.

The men who are trusted with the job of making America safe are not doing their best, for they are not doing the utmost that could be done.

Where there is no vision the people perish. And since the beginning of this horror, the leaders in all free countries have lacked the vision to realize the immensity of the danger and prepare adequate defenses.

When heroic France, crippled and reeling, appealed for terms of peace—even at that late hour—the government of England called upon the people for greater effort and new precautions to save their country.

Even so late as the retreat from Norway, leaders decided that less effort was necessary and held up orders for American war material.

Glance back over newspaper headlines of the last few months and again and again you will come across the assertion that England has promised more or decided to do more.

Never, apparently, did any official realize that England's plight was desperate enough to require the final and utmost limit of effort. Moderate effort was enough. More could be done tomorrow if necessary. No sense in getting hysterical about it. We can do what's necessary when the time comes.

And our own leaders—those on whom we depend and whose failure will mean our utter ruin—are making the same fatal mistake. "No immediate danger," says Lindbergh; and our leaders hesitate to go the limit lest they seem ridiculous and invite criticism.</ gum came yesterday from the State Department of Agriculture. Commissioner Columbus Roberts received a letter from the Chic Development Company, of New York, inquiring as to the availability of peachtree gum in Georgia.

"We are interested at this time in gums that may be available in the United States, and we wish to inquire about peachtree gum, that is, the availability of this gum and the price," the letter said. Several days ago the agricultural department received a similar letter asking about sweet gum.

War Sufferers.

That war in Europe, I am informed by press dispatches, is causing acute suffering in New York. Or certain parts of New York.

The story voices the complaints of the swank hotels and clubs of Manhattan, through their chefs.

Epicures among their patrons are growing thin. Soon their bones will protrude through their epidermis. They will pine away, even unto death and join Diamond Jim Brady in the Great Beyond.

Because truffles from France have become scarce beyond belief. There remains little pate de foie gras from Strasbourg, home of the stuffed goose.

Anchovies from the Mediterranean are hardly to be had. There is a dearth of those famous English jams and marmalades. Italian salami is missing. And no Irish bacon.

As Sherman is said to have remarked: "War is hell."

But let's hope our brave people will bear up and carry on.

I cannot recommend substitutes for truffles or the delectable pate de foie gras, but there's a Georgia bacon, from descendants of the wiregrass razorback hog, which is reported to be super-ultra. A streak of lean and a streak of fat. A delicacy obtained, so it is said, by feeding razorbacks one day and starving them the next.

Wanted, an Onion.

My heart goes out to the gourmands—or gourmets—I never can get them straight, deprived of their anchovies.

Because one night last week I sat up late, almost to midnight, reading an absorbing crime story. When the last corpse was buried and the last suspect had confessed and ended his life with prussic acid concealed in a ring, I discovered I was hungry.

I was alone in the house. The refrigerator and the pantry contained numerous delectable viands. Beans, corned beef, tomato juice, pineapple, salmon and sardines.

But my heart and soul and stomach cried out for an onion.

A big, white, juicy onion. With salt and a dash of vinegar and a bottle or two of beer.

The beer was there. And the salt and vinegar. And rye bread. But no onion.

Even as one neglects to bring his other shirt home from the laundry on Saturday afternoon I had overlooked laying in a supply of onions. I could blame nobody but myself.

I was hungry. Hungry, as the fellow says, as a lady wolf in mid-winter. But all I craved was an onion. A big onion.

It was midnight. The family car stood in the driveway. But where could one procure an onion at midnight?

I abandoned the idea and hungrily climbed the stairs.

Next evening, when I set about preparing my dinner, I discovered I'd forgotten onions again. I really need a social secretary. Though if I insisted on onions she'd likely prove most unsocial.

Balance of Trade.

In some statistical article a few days ago I read that Georgia keeps on staying on the wrong side of the ledger.

That is, we spend more on stuff brought into the state than we take in from products we sell outside of the state.

I understand that's been the case for years, but I can't get it. Because if my family had spent more for years than we had drawn in income we'd all be in the almshouse. But maybe it works differently with a state.

International experts write a great deal about "trade balances." If we don't buy a lot from France then France can't buy a lot from us.

Georgia sells a lot of peaches and watermelons and peanuts and some other products of her soil. Usually there's a complaint that the market was so bad the growers lose money.

Some of the stuff we import is necessarily imported. Gasoline, for instance. We can't raise it. Lord only knows how much money goes to Texas and Mexico and Louisiana for gas and oil.

Our clothing—men's and women's—or most of it, comes from other states. So do most of our butter and eggs and flour and meats—and even chickens.

Statistics prove that everything is going out and little coming in. On the face of it we've been broke for 20 years and getting steadily worse.

Yet, somehow, we get three meals a day—or most of us do.

Naked and Fat.

During the worst of the depression a few years ago I asked Fred Hand, of Pelham, how things looked down in his county:

"We've got the fattest bunch of naked people you ever saw," he replied.

He meant that nobody had any money to buy clothes. There wasn't any money. But the folks were eating. They were on the wrong side of the balance of trade, but they were eating.

Maybe the statistics don't take into account that country folk raise quite a little food. From turnip greens to side meat.

Not as much as the farm experts tell them they should, but some. I ran across an old couple up in the mountains a year or two ago. They lived in a cabin. They had a couple of acres of land under cultivation. I asked the old man how much money he'd seen in the last year. He figured it was somewhere around $90.

"But we get along," he said. "I raise a little of this and a little of that and I trade it for meat and tobacco and snuff. We ain't never been hungry."

Yes, I know thousands would have been hungry had it not been for the various relief measures. A city man out of a job can grow hungry mighty quick.

But back on the farm? Well, I've never heard of a rural family quite reduced to stealing turnips, like Jeeter Lester in "Tobacco Road."

Six DeKalb Officials Sure Of Re-election

Stiff Battle Seen for Legislative and Coroner Posts.

Six DeKalb county officials yesterday were certain of re-election but two other incumbents face opposition and a stiff political battle is expected to center around a contested seat in the legislature and a six-man fight for coroner.

The county qualifying deadline was Saturday, and provided no competition—thus making re-election tantamount for Tax Commissioner Homer H. Howard, Ordinary Vess S. Morgan, Superior Court Clerk Ben Burgess and Superintendent of Schools W. M. Rainey.

Two state legislators from DeKalb are without competition. They are Mel Turner and Murphey C. Candler. John Dunaway and Paul Lindsey have qualified for nomination to the seat to be vacated by Augustine Sams.

However, Sheriff Jake Hall's renomination will be contested in September by Joe Feenster, and Roy Leathers, solicitor general of the Stone Mountain circuit, will be opposed by Pierre Howard.

No candidates have entered for judge of the superior court, Stone

Mountain circuit, now held by James C. Davis. The deadline for this office is July 29.

Running for coroner to succeed Hoyle Nichols are Charlie Austin, of Decatur; L. D. Broadwater, of Avondale; Weyman Braswell, of Decatur; Paul Estes, of Poplar Springs; W. M. Haynes, of Kirkwood, and S. J. Warren, of Brookhaven.

NEW ROTARY OFFICERS.

Gene's Oratory Draws Throng From North, South, East, West

GENE'S CROWD They came from the south and they came from the east and the north and the west to hear fiery "Gene" Talmadge launch his campaign for Governor. Here's part of the Albany crowd, in sunshine that was an oasis in far-spreading rain.

DEBUT Mrs. Columbus Roberts, at the insistence of the crowd, made her debut as a political speaker at Blue Ridge yesterday as her husband (at left) opened his drive for Governor. She urged hubby's election.

A VIGOROUS PLUNGE into his bid for the governorship was made yesterday by Hugh Howell (above), as he addressed Independence Day celebrants in the Ellaville courthouse.

BATTLED BRITISH The powerful French battleship Strasbourg was reported among the French fleet units engaged in the furious sea battle with the British in the Mediterranean.

COLORFUL STILL The flash and fire that is Talmadge hasn't been dimmed by the years. This picture of "Gene," galluses and all, is proof. It was taken yesterday as the ex-Governor launched his newest campaign before a large gathering in sunshine at Albany. Talmadge is seeking a third term (Story on Page 8)

THEY LISTENED INTENTLY Intense interest is engraved on the faces of this Ellaville crowd that heard Hugh Howell launch his campaign for Governor yesterday. Howell labelled his four opponents as supporters of the Rivers administration, which he charged was a blot on the fair name of Georgia. The gubernatorial aspirant minced no words in attacking his opponents. (Story on Page 8)

American Tells Of His Escape From Germans

Ambulance Driver Seized Twice; Saved Two Nazis' Lives.

By W. J. DEETH.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. PARIS, July 4.—(By Wire) Here is the story explosively told me by Jan Glowacki, American ambulance driver, of how, after escaping from Poland he reached Paris, joined the American volunteer ambulance corps went up to the front at the beginning of the great offensive, evacuated wounded soldiers and refugees under bombing and gun fire, was taken prisoner by the Germans and had a thrilling escape.

He saved a German officer's life, was again taken prisoner as a spy and then escaped from a train and, after hiding two days in the woods reached Frankfurt. After reporting to the American consul there he got back to France. Born in Jersey City, N. J., 36 years ago Glowacki, is an alert fellow, tanned by open-air life. He told his story with great modesty. He was one of the 12 drivers who set out in charge of Major Albert W. Raymond—who is now a prisoner—for Givet on May 12, two days after the German invasion of Belgium started. They got to Braux on the Meuse, but no further, for they found the bridge blown up.

Plenty of Work. But there was plenty of work for them, and in spite of air raids they evacuated the wounded and the refugees toward Soissons and Rheims. Meanwhile Glowacki with two others was told by Captain Pospishil to return to Soissons.

After Pospishil had taken care of 10 refugees who had been wounded by bombs, Glowacki went back to Soissons, but could find no ambulances. Glowacki told me why.

They were asked to go in the direction of Laon and had reached Rozy when, "all of a sudden we saw German tanks hurtling down our way. They seemed to have come from nowhere, and in a few

Appointments of Knox, Stimson Approved by Majority of Public

Gallup Survey Shows 71 Per Cent of Voters Favor F. D. R. Action; Republicans, Democrats Join in Attitude.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion. PRINCETON, N. J., July 4.—President Roosevelt's nomination to his cabinet of two prominent Republicans, Colonel Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson, meets with the overwhelming approval of voters polled throughout the country by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

Knox and Stimson, named as secretary of the navy and secretary of war, respectively, were approved early this week before senate committees.

If confirmation of their appointment had been left to the people, the poll indicates that it would have been approved by a vote of more than 7 to 3. Of course, the survey does not measure the public reaction, if any, to statements made by Knox and Stimson before the senate committees. Interviewers at work in the 48 states asked a cross-section of voters this question:

"President Roosevelt has named two Republicans, Frank Knox and Henry Stimson, to be secretaries of navy and war in his cabinet. Do you approve or disapprove of his action?"

Those expressing an opinion voted:

	Approve	Disapprove
Rep. Ap- pointments	71%	29%
Republi- cans	85%	15%
Democ- rats	57%	43%

The rank and file of G. O. P. voters with definite opinions on the subject approve the two appointments by a comfortable majority.

mines I could see they would be all around us.

"I was then with one other ambulance driver named Shipley, and, leaving our ambulances we lay flat on the ground off the track of the oncoming tanks. We started to crawl toward Laon, but I lost sight of Shipley and went on alone.

12 Hours in Hiding. "It was getting dark, and for 12 hours I lay or crawled. The Germans had now begun their attack on Laon, and at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, I was sitting up when a German tank drove by and three soldiers behind it saw me.

"I could do nothing as they were armed; and after showing my papers I was taken to a church at Rozy, where there were a number of French wounded. They asked me where the ambulance was and when I told them they drove me back under guard to get it on the road again."

Glowacki now found himself doing ambulance work for the Germans and had some exciting experiences. Once it took them 14 hours to go 15 kilometers because of the air raids. He had nothing to eat and had no sleep for two days.

Though he was rigorously treated, he protested vigorously at Aubigny when the Germans started to obliterate the stars on the American flag which was painted on an ambulance. The German officer in charge did not insist, contenting himself with painting "W H" on the ambulance car.

Accused of Gun Theft. All this had been real enough adventure, but worse was coming. "On May 10 at Aubigny I was accused of having stolen a revolver, and an officer told me I would be shot the next morning if it was not returned." Glowacki continued. "At 4 o'clock in the morning I rose and, taking a bicycle which I saw in a field hospital, I went to Rocquigny."

"But there were only two old women left in that place. Everything had been looted by the Germans. I took the road toward Soissons. Suddenly I found myself in the middle of a number of long-range guns. It was dark and I slept in a woods as British and French airplanes were raiding in that territory.

"I awoke with the Germans around me. And an officer said, 'You are a spy in civilian clothes.' Four German soldiers pointed guns at me and I was taken to the Laon citadel. From there I was escorted to Banque de Laon and left there in a car with a German officer and chauffeur.

"On the road to Montcornet the car fell into a shell hole and turned upside down. I pulled the cover and the driver out, and had got them 10 yards away when the gasoline tank exploded. The noise of the explosion drew the attention of the tanks, and Germans came, making inquiries.

Rescue Helped Him. "The fact that I had saved the lives of these two men probably did me good, for I was taken to Montcornet and handed over to the gendarmerie and then sent to the citadel at Charleville as a prisoner. Then I went to Sedan, Neufchateau and Treves.

"I was on my way to Frankfurt when the train drew up, due to an air raid alarm. Still determined to escape, I noticed we were near a woods. So when the train slowed down I slipped out. I stayed in the woods two days; then I walked to Frankfurt, where the American consul obtained my release as a noncombatant."

Glowacki had a great reception at the American Legion in Paris, where all the chiefs spoke of him as a hard-working, capable and willing man.

G. O. P. Nominees To Map Campaign

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie will go to Washington Monday to discuss the campaign with his running-mate, Senator Charles McNary, of Oregon.

Willkie, ignoring the holiday to work in his New York office, said he also hoped to see Republican members of the house and senate before leaving Washington Monday night or Tuesday for a short visit with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Phil Willkie, of Rushville, Ind.

He said he was still undecided about where to spend his vacation and that he hadn't decided when to visit his boyhood home in Elwood, Ind.

He meets with a special sub-committee of the Republican national committee at 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow to discuss campaign strategy.

MOSQUITOES Make You Miserable?

Here's what to do. Close all windows. Use a good sprayer and fill each room with a mist of Bee Brand Insect Spray. Leave rooms closed 15 minutes. When you go back, the only mosquitoes will be the dead ones on the floor. Don't confuse Bee Brand Spray with other insecticides. It has no nasty kerosene smell—only a clean cedar fragrance that soon disappears. And Bee Brand really kills flies, mosquitoes and other flying insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use in the home. Insist on genuine, quick-killing Bee Brand Insect Spray—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back.

Big War Drills To Experiment With Blitzkrieg

70,000 Await Maneuvers Featuring Modern Warfare Methods.

CAMP BEAUREGARD, La., July 4.—(AP)—Regular army troops begin preparing here tomorrow for another great concentration of 70,000 soldiers in maneuvers far more modern than those which ended only two months ago with a blitzkrieg that torpedoed many general staff ideas on warfare.

Almost the entire regular army and national guard strength from a dozen southern and southwestern states will be brought to the ideal Sabine river area of Louisiana and Texas for war games lasting throughout August.

The states involved are Texas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, the Carolinas and Tennessee.

Lieutenant General Stanley D. Embick, veteran of more than 40 years army experience, including that of chief of staff of the American section of the supreme war council in 1918, will command the August maneuvers as he did those last May.

The May maneuvers, in which 70,000 regular army troops—the nation's entire combat force—participated, were outlined along the standard old line of warfare with the infantry the keystone of attack and defense.

The games actually began the day before Hitler invaded the Low Countries. Before the games ended three weeks later, plans were changed radically to experiment with a blitzkrieg.

Electrical Color Photography Picks Flaw in War Material

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—A great impetus to the production of war materials in American industrial plants was foreseen today as the result of a new system of electrical color photography.

The method, which is under consideration by the National Defense Research Committee, is extremely simple but so sensitive that it will ferret out one part of contaminating substance from 999,999 other parts and show it up clearly on a photographic plate.

It is possible, for example, to take a part of an airplane motor, photograph it and within a few minutes be able to determine whether it contains impurities which would make it break down while in use.

In making the pictures, the sample to be tested is placed on a sheet of photographic paper and then sandwiched between it and a piece of platinum or other inert metal. A weak electrical current from a small battery is then shot through the specimen, leaving on the color negative a tracing of what the specimen contains.

Previously the best available method of examining such specimens was to burn parts of them at high temperature and study the color lines which they emitted through the spectroscopic, which outlines the various elements through a finely ruled glass grating.

The new device was developed by Dr. H. W. Hermance, of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York.

F. D. R. Opens Japan Pleased With France's Attitude in East

Exposition Will Celebrate 75 Years of Racial Progress.

CHICAGO, July 4.—(AP)—President Roosevelt opened the American Negro exposition by remote control today.

He pressed a button in Hyde Park and the lights came on throughout the Chicago Coliseum, signaling the start of the Negroes' own world's fair.

It will run for 60 days, until Labor Day, September 2, celebrating 75 years of racial progress since emancipation in 1865.

Truman K. Gibson Jr., executive director, said he expects 2,000,000 persons, Negroes from throughout the nation and many of their white neighbors, to attend. The state of Illinois appropriated $75,000 for the show and the federal government authorized an equal sum.

These actions hermetically sealed Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's only all-year route of supply, but the route through British Burma—usable only part of the year—still is open and the British government has not indicated any intention of acquiescing to the Japanese demand that it be closed.

Closure of the Indo-China route, say authoritative sources here, all but paralyzes operation of the $45,000,000 credit scheme under which China imported American fuel oil, trucks and machinery and maintained its credit with the American Import-Export Bank through exports of wood-oil and tungsten. It was unofficially estimated that China so far has repaid about $4,000,000 of the credit.

Closure of the route through Burma, British sources assert, would make further repayment of the American credit definitely impossible.

United Americas Urged by Daniels

MEXICO CITY, July 4.—(AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph Daniels declared today that all the Americas should stand solidly with the United States in defense of the Monroe Doctrine against any aggression from abroad.

Speaking at a July 4 embassy reception he urged Mexico and the other American republics to pledge themselves to the preservation of democracy.

President Cardenas sent the ambassador a brief message congratulating the United States on the anniversary. American flags flew from legations and embassies.

Steps for Defense Urged by N. E. A.

MILWAUKEE, July 4.—(AP)—The National Education Association, preparing to wind up its annual convention, went on record today as advocating "such preparedness as would make the United States fully able to defend itself."

The stand was taken in a resolution which was adopted by voice vote. Compulsory military training was not included specifically in the resolution, the resolutions committee explaining that the wordage as offered was sufficiently strong to cover the situation.

Another resolution adopted urged a continuation and expansion of a program of action to promote inter-American friendship.

Young Earle Blocked From Joining R. A. F.

Mother Is 'So Happy and Excited I Can Hardly Speak.'

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 4.—(AP)—News that George H. Earle IV, son of the United States minister to Bulgaria, has been prevented from joining the British Royal Air Force made his mother "so happy and excited I can hardly speak."

"I'm perfectly delighted," Mrs. Earle said here today when informed that her husband, former Governor of Pennsylvania, had announced in Sofia that the American neutrality act barred their son from the R. A. F.

Mrs. Earle came here last night from Washington, where she sought to prevent her son's enlistment. State Department and British embassy officials told her there was nothing they could do.

Dispatches from Sofia today, however, quoted Earle as saying his son had not enlisted and would return to the United States and try to join the American air force.

"I'm not trying to ground George," Mrs. Earle said. "Our family is very air-minded. But I feel that if he is going to enlist he should offer his services to our country."

Mrs. Earle said her son passed examinations as a flyer at the Philadelphia navy yard a year ago but lacked sufficient college credits to join the naval air force.

"I am hoping very much he will be taken into the navy force," she added. "This will be the happiest day of my life."

Mrs. Earle is spending the holiday here with three other sons, her mother, and Anne Bullitt, daughter of the United States ambassador to France.

Rumania's New Cabinet Plans Axis System

Desperate Carol Installs Nazi in Move for German Aid.

BUCHAREST, July 4.—(AP)—King Carol's new pro-Nazi government announced tonight after its first meeting that "the foreign policy of this cabinet is an honest adaptation to the system created by the Rome-Berlin Axis."

In a communique the new regime, headed by Ion Gigu, said: "We do this not only as an expression of realistic policy, but also as a logical consequence of the political and biological principles of the members of this cabinet, who are the true representatives of the feelings of the people."

Rumania's destiny was in the hands of a nationalistic, pro-German, anti-Semitic government which diplomatic quarters regarded as King Carol's supreme bid for German support.

Announcement of the new regime, headed by 54-year-old Gigu, close friend of Field Marshal Hermann Goering, followed unconfirmed reports of new Soviet demands on the troubled kingdom—this time demands for control of strategic frontier bridges along the Prut and Danube rivers forming the new Soviet-Rumanian border.

The change of government was abrupt. Premier Gheorghe Tatarescu's pro-Ally cabinet resigned this morning, and by mid-afternoon the new cabinet had been sworn in.

There were many sighs of Carol's eagerness for German support, among them:

1. The new cabinet includes 10 former members of the pro-Nazi Iron Guard and five members of the former anti-Semitic Goga government, including Gigu.

2. Hans Otto Roth, leader of the Transylvanian Germans, is in the new cabinet as minister of minorities. He is known as anti-Hungarian.

3. British oil men, deemed likely to destroy British-owned Rumanian wells rather than see the oil go to Germany, were ordered to leave the country within 24 hours, but tonight it was learned that this order had been temporarily suspended after intervention by the British legation.

The legation argued that the men should have more time to arrange for their families and property.

Covered Bridge Fast Becoming Symbol of Past

Scenes of Romantic Rendezvous Fall Before Engineering Progress.

Georgia's ancient covered bridges, where many a romantic rendezvous took place, rapidly are passing from the scene, martyrs to engineering progress.

Of the many that once stretched across the rivers and creeks, there are now less than two dozen left, says C. N. Crocker, bridge engineer for the state highway department.

As quickly as possible they are being replaced by long spans of concrete that permit the motorist to glide across without the clatter of loose boards so characteristic of covered bridges.

In many instances, however, the covered bridges are left standing beside the new structures to add beauty to the countryside, Crocker pointed out. This gives the old-timers a chance to reminisce as they ride along the smooth strip of concrete.

Place to 'Spark.'

With a reminiscent gleam in his eye, the bridge engineer explained that in the horse and buggy days the covered bridges were good places for what he termed "parking," the modern-day equivalent being "courting," "petting," or what have you.

It was right nice riding into the covered bridges late in the evening with your best girl and listening to the rippling of the water beneath—at least that's what old-timers say.

Then came the automobile with its glaring headlights, rumbling motor and noisy horn. It spoiled all of this. There was no chance for a fellow to do any serious courting.

But for the benefit of those original lads who would like to borrow a horse and buggy and retire to one of the old-time bridges for a rendezvous, here are the locations of several. (Courtesy of the State Highway Department and not the Wild Life Department.)

Athens-Commerce road, 10 miles north of Athens over Sandy creek; Homer-Carnesville, over Webb creek; Lawton and Anderson, S. C., over Tugaloo river; Nacoochee and Clarksville, over the Chattahoochee river; Nacoochee and Clarksville, over the Mauldin Mill creek; Carnesville and Danielsville, over Broad river; Carnesville and Danielsville, over the Hudson river; Cleveland and Clarksville, over the Elkhorn river; Elkhorn, over the Elkhorn river; Chatahoochee river and a creek; Carnesville and Royston, over Broad river; Conyers and Loganville, west of Thomaston, east of Woodland; 16 miles north of Manchester; one mile south of West Point on the West Point-Columbus road, and five miles south of West Point.

T. Harvey Mathis Dies in Americus

AMERICUS, Ga., July 4.—(P)—T. Harvey Mathis, 48, prominent Americus business man and civic worker, died of a heart attack in a hospital here today.

Mathis, who was distributor for the Gulf Oil Company here, had been in ill health several months, but had been able to resume his business activities. He was a former president of the Americus Rotary Club and a deacon in Central Baptist church.

Survivors include his wife, his mother, Mrs. Jesse Mathis, of Americus; a daughter, Mrs. Mack Cheatham, of Griffin; two sons, Harvey Mathis, of Americus, and Evan Mathis, executive of an Americus bank, and three sisters, Mrs. Roy Murphy, of Tifton; Mrs. R. A. Cochran, of Philadelphia, and Miss Linda Mathis, of Americus.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late today.

Divers Examine Stern Of Fire-Damaged Liner

NEW YORK, July 4.—(P)—Divers went down today to examine the water-logged stern of the liner Algonquin, victim of a stubborn six-hour fire that destroyed the after cargo holds of the ship as she was preparing to leave her pier for Miami and Houston.

Port officials said that the partial sinking of the liner had done no damage to near-by Holland tunnel.

PROGRAM CHAIRMAN. MACON, Ga., July 4.—(P)—Mark Smith, of Thomaston, new international Kiwanis president, has announced that Hamilton Holt, of Macon, past Georgia district governor, would be program chairman for the International Kiwanis convention, to be held in Atlanta next year.

REMEMBERED BY OLD-TIMERS—Fast passing from the Georgia scene is this type of covered bridge which the old-timers say was an ideal place for "parking" before the day of the automobile. This bridge is one of the last of two dozen remaining in use in Georgia and is between Carnesville and Homer.

Progress of Movies Is Kept Steadily Upward, But It Started Back in 'Birth of Nation' Times

'Grapes of Wrath' Not Termed Pioneer of 'Adult' Field.

HOLLYWOOD, July 4.—(P)—Are the movies "growing up?" Yes—but it isn't a sudden progress. It's been going on for years. You can't date it from "The Grapes of Wrath," although that picture alone was equivalent to a foot's growth. You can't date it from "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," an equally sensational step toward the screen's intellectual manhood. You can't cite any of the recent "daring" or "thoughtful" films as the one picture that proves the point.

The movies came of age, critics said, back in 1915 when the talkies released "The Birth of a Nation." They went a step further (although the box-office didn't agree) when Griffith produced "Intolerance," a dramatic study of civilization in various ages.

And they have been coming of age periodically ever since.

Set-Back by Sound. The screen had grown up, technically at least, when the talkies came along and sent it back to diapers. But before many years, the talking infant was giving out such worthy films as "Hallelujah," "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Arrowsmith," "Cavalcade," "Of Human Bondage" and "The Informer." There were pictures of social consciousness like "Black Legion," and "Make Way for Tomorrow," and "They Won't Forget," and distinguished biographical films, notably "Louis Pasteur" and "Emile Zola," which entertained while they preached of noble service and human rights. All these, remember, came in the first full decade of the talking picture, along with a host of thumping good pictures probably less significant but of equal or greater entertainment value. But their companions in that decade were a whole army of fair-to-middling or downright dull movies.

"The Grapes of Wrath" is deemed a landmark because, for the first time, a Hollywood movie company dealt with a vital contemporary problem honestly and without pulling punches. It was so successful at box-offices, even in small towns, that more such honesty was indicated—provided it has the other necessary ingredients—entertainment and art.

One Didn't Click. "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," the finest of films based on the life of Lincoln, has been a box-office disappointment. It is thoughtful, stirring, emotionally appealing, certainly an "adult" movie. Yet it has missed fire somewhere along the line.

"Of Mice and Men" has been a box-office success, strange fare as it is to audiences nourished on the gruel of boy-meets-girl and boy-meets-adventure. The first is strong stuff, likewise thoroughly adult.

"The Primrose Path," when you speak of adult entertainment, must be rated highly. It dances along the sharp edges of the censors' scissors, but honest and forthright and realistic it certainly is, and done with artistic skill.

"Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" is in a class by itself among the biographical movies. Dealing honestly with a once taboo theme—venereal disease—it projects an inspiring, often stirring picture of a great scientist's struggles. The film will not be among the top grossers of the year, barring a sudden spurt on repeat runs, but it has done very well.

Some Thumpers. These are but a few of the adult films the new decade has offered in its first four months. What is the celluloid company they keep?

As always, a few thumping good movies ("Rebecca," "My Son, My Son," "Gone With the Wind," "Northwest Passage," etc.), a number of more than averagely entertaining pictures, and a greater number of more or less amusing time-killers.

The average may be maintained as the months move on, for there is naturally an increase of interest in the timely, sociological film—just as there is a wetting of attention to horse operas, musicals, or sea films when one of those types makes money.

But the run-of-the-mill movie will continue to be somewhat less than adult. If it isn't Hollywood is truly on the verge of a revolution. Things go that way in literature, plays, music—all the arts. Why should we expect Hollywood to be the exception?

George Requests Details Of Tobacco Program

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(P)—Announcement of details of the new tobacco program before the Georgia markets open August 8 is being sought by Senator George, Democrat, Georgia.

He told Secretary Wallace in his request yesterday that early announcement of the terms of any loan or purchase program would help stabilize the bright leaf market. Wallace gave no promise, George reported, as the program depends on a July 20 referendum of new tobacco quotas.

Wallace assured him that the agricultural department would act "as speedily as possible" after the result of the referendum is known, George said. George also asked early announcement of the cotton and peanut program.

Texas Gunmen, Killed By Officers, Identified

AUSTIN, Texas, July 4.—(P)—State police said today fingerprints identified two killers slain by officers in south Texas yesterday as Leroy White, 18, of Houston, and R. B. Williams, 18, of Stamford, Texas.

The gunmen fatally shot a woman and an aged watchman before officers cornered and killed them. Williams had a reformatory record for armed robbery.

Power Production Gains 9.3 Per Cent Over 1939

NEW YORK, July 4.—(P)—Electric power output increased to 2,514,461,000 kilowatt hours in the week ended June 29 from 2,508,825,000 in the preceding week, the Edison Electric Institute said yesterday.

Latest output was 2 of one per cent above the preceding week and 9.3 per cent more than 2,300,268,600 kilowatt hours in the comparable 1939 week.

Academy Film 'Cavalcade' Is Offered at Fox

Cast Made Up Of Those Who Have Won Rare Movie Awards.

Motion picture history is offered at the Fox theater, opening today in "Cavalcade of Academy Awards," in which Warner Brothers presents a cast of only Oscar winners.

The technicolor attraction, personally supervised by Frank Capra, himself an award winner for direction, is a "Who's Who" of filmland gathered from every studio. Every star who ever won an academy award is in it and the annual banquets are reproduced just as they took place in the Coconut Grove.

For the first time, this special feature reveals facts about stars and the awards not heretofore made public. For instance, how did the award become known as "Oscar"? It happened in 1935, when Bette Davis received the presentation for her performance in "Dangerous." Her typical remark was: "So this is Oscar."

In addition to this history of every winner from 1938 to 1939, the Fox will offer "The Ghost Breakers."

'New Moon' Goes To Rhodes Here

The first Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy film in more than a year is "New Moon," now playing at the Rhodes theater.

Fans of the two singers will find their favorites back again in the costumes and manners of the 1780s and in a world of imagination, song thrill and intrigue which includes with its unfolding shipwrecks, riots and life on a magical tropic island.

Miss MacDonald's beauty as the lovely Marianne de Beaumanoire is rivalled only by her voice as she sings such popular favorites as "Lover Come Back to Me," "Marianne," "Paree," "Rondelet," "One Kiss" and "Wanting You." As the dashing Duc de Villiers, Nelson Eddy is superb. His songs include the stirring "Stout Hearted Men" and the hauntingly lovely "Softly as in a Morning Sunrise."

Diorama Here Shows Importance of Railroads

A diorama exhibit by the Association of American Railroads, designed to show importance of railroads to the economic and social welfare of the nation, has been opened at the Terminal station.

The exhibit will show here through July 16. It will be open from 8 to 11 o'clock; 1:30 to 2:30 o'clock, and from 4 to 9 o'clock.

Druggist Is Candidate For Mexico Presidency

MEXICO CITY, July 4.—(P)—A last-minute surprise candidate for the Mexican presidency—a druggist from Lower California—was disclosed today in the final list of entrants for next Sunday's election.

He is Ramon de la Paz, of Mexicali.

He is so little known politically that capital circles and the Department of Interior, which registered the candidates, could offer no information about him.

FHA Insures 45 Million in Georgia Loans

Fulton and DeKalb Lead State, 17-Month Total Discloses.

The Federal Housing Administration insured home building and improvement loans in Georgia totaling more than $45,000,000 in the last 17 months, it was announced yesterday in Washington.

Approximately 38 per cent of the loans were in Fulton county.

Total number of loans guaranteed in the state by the agency during the period was 39,478. Sum insured was $45,772,990.

Fulton county, with $17,329,584 building and improvement loans for 13,247 projects, led the state. DeKalb county was second with loans totaling $8,448,484 for 6,540 projects.

Other counties whose loans totaled a million or more dollars are Chatham, Bibb, Muscogee and Richmond. Loans of $500,000 or more were made in Clarke, Dougherty, Floyd, Spalding and Walker counties.

U. S. Wants To Give Thousands of Joads a Helping Hand; Congress Committee To Hold Hearings on Migratory Workers

Many States Alarmed by Influx of Floating Army of Poverty.

By SIGRID ARNE.
WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—Now that we've wept about the "Grapes of Wrath" people, what are we doing about them? Do the thousands of Joad families have to go on burying Grandpa by the side of the road?

That's what lots of people are beginning to ask. One of them, gentle-voiced Representative John Tolan, who comes from California. He has a go-ahead from congress to investigate. His five-man committee will start hearings after the political conventions. Nobody knows just how many people are on the road, what their health is, how many youngsters are illiterate. But Tolan says it's intolerably wasteful to permit 200,000 people to pour into California lettuce fields when only 140,000 are needed.

Tolan asks: Isn't it crazy that any day a New Yorker can telegraph and learn what the weather is in Seattle, but when 8,000 Texans start toward Montana sugar beet fields nobody knows whether they're wanted—or even that they're coming? Other states are beginning to feel the same trouble. Virginia labor floats up to the New Jersey cranberry bogs. Alabama drift to Ohio onion fields, on to the Michigan apple orchards. Thousands of families are not sitting around demanding that the government support them, but are using their last pennies to hunt jobs. People that strap a bed spring onto the jalopy, live on such poor diets that they're becoming public charges. There are some 350,000 families hunting chances to hoe, plant and harvest various crops. They get between $25 and $450 a year. There are 2,000,000 people in the army of floating farm hands—the old crowd who followed the wheat, the new mob that owned small farms, but were driven out. Most of these floating farm hands are outside the relief picture. They've moved too much to have a legal residence. The Department of Agriculture reports: In the old cotton belt there are between two and seven million people that will have to move because the land is giving out; in the Appalachian coal belt, 340,000 to 600,000; in the cutover Great Lakes lumber belt, 15,000, and in the Great Plains wheat country, 390,000 to 900,000.

DeKalb County Shows Decline In Death Rate

Births Hold Average for First Six Months of 1940.

DeKalb county's death rate declined sharply during the first six months of this year. Dr. Rugus Evans, county physician, reported yesterday, with 388 deaths through this June as compared to 466 for the corresponding period last year. Meanwhile, the birth rate in the community has remained almost the same with the health department issuing 595 certificates this year as compared to 598 through June last year.

The work of the department, Dr. Evans pointed out, has increased so far this year because of immunization treatments given school children. This year 8,262 shots have been given as compared to 1,634 last year. Venereal treatments also increased from 1,168 the first six months of 1939 to 4,280 so far in 1940. Tuberculosis cases have gone up from 112 last year to nearly 200 this year. Maternity cases the first half of 1939 called for 105 visits by the health department while this year the number increased to 302. Pre-school examinations have been given 268 children this year as compared to 363 last year, and school examinations have totaled 2,280 as compared to 3,044 last year.

Housewife Finds That Modern Conditions Need Not Upset Health. Tells Her Friends.

The hurry and bustle of modern living does not give us enough time to rest and build up our bodies. Work must go on, and Mrs. G. J. Bernier, resident of 385 Lawton Street for the past seven years, admits that it's twice as hard to do when you're nervous and run-down. "I was in a terribly nervous and run-down condition," she says. "I happened to remember that years ago I had taken SARGON, and it had benefited me greatly. So I decided to try it again. Even I was amazed at how wonderfully, how quickly this New and Improved SARGON worked. . . my appetite was better, I began to feel more energy. And another thing I like about the New and Improved SARGON is its pleasant, wine-like taste. I can certainly recommend it to others, because after the sixth bottle, I find myself in perfect health, no longer in need of any medicine." Don't let yourself get run down this summer! If you suffer from nervousness due to lack of Vitamin B-1, lack of iron in the blood, incomplete elimination, or poor digestion, find relief in thousands of happy housewives who have used SARGON. ROADSIDE SERVICE—"Oakies" park the family jalopy beside a road near a California town and eat a snack. There are thousands of these families on the highways and they present a problem which congress will try to solve.

Sweden, Caught in War's Pinch, Quit Fighting 127 Years Ago

By SIGRID ARNE,
Associated Press Feature Service Writer.

Sweden hung up her sword for all time (she hoped) after Napoleon lost his shirt at Waterloo in 1813. Her first Bernadotte was then on the throne. He had been a field marshal for Napoleon, and had been elected King of Sweden. He didn't like the Little Corporal. The first thing he did was to swing in behind England. After that Sweden settled down to make the most of what she had.

Twice since 1813 she has had good, old-fashioned reasons to go to war. But she wanted to stay at peace. Sweden learned centuries ago, when the Germans were only a bunch of disunited lordlings, that wars cost more than they're worth. So, In 1905 when Norway said she was tired of the 100-year rule of Swedish kings, the countries separated after a conference. Again, in 1918 Sweden disputed with Finland over the Aaland Islands in the Baltic. The islanders speak Swedish. They petitioned the League of Nations to be restored to Sweden. But the League gave the islanders home rule, under Finland. Sweden acquiesced.

The Swedes have been on their peninsula about 10,000 years. They learned to raise crops, make boats some 6,000 years ago. Around 800 A. D. the Vikings invaded Europe. They went up Russian rivers, portaged, and down into the Black sea. They traded where they could, fought where they couldn't. A Swedish king, "Rurik the Red," gave Russia her name. Vikings Were Converted.

Christian missionaries arrived about 1,000 A. D. King Olaf fore- swore the old Viking gods of Val-halla and was baptized. From 1388 to 1435 the three Scandinavians—Norway, Sweden and Denmark—had a loose union, ruled for the most part from Denmark. But the Danes got rough. In 1435 a mine-owner called an assembly of representative Swedes. It was called the "Riksdag," has met ever since. Only Britain and Iceland have older assemblies.

The real break came in 1525 when Gustav Vasa, a young Swedish noble, escaped from a Danish prison. The story goes that he got a Swedish farmer to hide him in a load of hay and drive north. But Danish soldiers stopped the farmer, drove bayonets into the hay, and cut Vasa. Vasa made no sound.

Vasa collected an army of Swedes, and drove down on the Danes. He was elected King. (Swedes always elected their kings up to 1544, when the throne became hereditary). He Built the Nation.

Vasa devoted his 40-year rule to building up agriculture, mining, army and navy. He's called the nation's founder. His grandson, Gustavus Adolphus, is another national hero. By his time Sweden was a major power. The Baltic was her lake. But she was determined to keep Catholics out of northern Europe. So she drove down into Europe with Gustavus Adolphus at the head of 13,000 Swedes. They won two of the world's decisive battles, but the king was killed.

It went on like that: fighting at times single-handed against England, Poland, Denmark and Russia. Little by little the people rebelled at the taxes for the army. So the nation rounded 1700 A. D. Began to develop scholars: Linnaeus, the father of botany; Scheele, the discoverer of oxygen; and Swedenborg, the philosopher.

In recent years she been visited by many students from foreign nations. They find Sweden has: almost free trade, religious liberty, compulsory education (since 1842); workmen's compensation (since 1912); old-age pensions and the eight-hour day (since 1919); collective bargaining (since 1928), and unemployment insurance and public works (since 1933). Swedes have never been serfs. Farms are broken up into small holdings, an average of 35 acres.

The government owns the main railroads, the radio, telegraph and telephone (with markedly low rates); most power plants, an interest in the best iron mines; gets all above 5 per cent profit on liquor (to discourage high-pressure selling of liquor); and controls the import of tobacco.

No needy person needs go without medical care. Ninety per cent of labor is organized. More than a third of the nation belongs to co-operatives. Even the royal family buys through one. Farmers' co-ops sell 90 per cent of all the milk weighed in. (Their dairies are something: electric light and the milkers wear gauze masks to insure clean milk.) Swedes buy more than they sell abroad. In '38, for instance, they bought $750,000,000 worth of goods here and sold only $35,000,000. But their export-import balance is kept even by foreign investments, the $25,000,000 a year Swedish ship-owners make, and by royalties on patents. They've been shipping iron since the Middle Ages. But they

Bass Courses Open Monday For Students

Pupils Will Study Many Activities During Summer.

Bass Community Recreation Center, offering more than 20 summer activity courses to junior and senior high school students, will open at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning at Bass Junior High School. The project will be staffed by volunteer instructors from the public school teachers, employees of the professional and service departments of the WPA and other interested citizens.

The program, offering courses in photography, marionettes, creative writing, automobile driving, Red Cross sewing, folk dancing, art, the construction of Soapbox Derby cars and aeroplane models will be in operation for three weeks between 8:30 and 11:30 in the mornings. Instruction is free. A small registration fee and the cost of materials are the only expenses.

stepped into prosperity in the industrial age. Not that they sold so much, but that they make high-priced metal products because of the skill of workmen. Their manufactures include some of the finest anti-aircraft guns in the world. Their inventors have invented, or refined, cream separators, automatic traffic lights and telephones. They produce razor blades, piano strings and watch springs, surgical instruments and some of the world's finest ball-bearings. A Swede invented safety matches.

Subsidy Programs Will Be Continued

WASHINGTON, July 4.—(AP)—The Agriculture Department announced yesterday it would continue export subsidy programs on cotton products, wheat, and wheat flour during the fiscal year which began yesterday.

These programs, financed by funds appropriated for disposal of agricultural surpluses, are designed to help American farmers regain and hold their "fair share" of world markets. The department makes payments to exporters on products sold abroad. The payments are designed to offset the effects of federal farm programs in pegging domestic prices above those in foreign markets.

Under the 1939-40 cotton and cotton products export program, sales amounted to 6,366,221 bales, including cotton products equivalent to 504,020 bales. Some are wise and some are otherwise. The really wise ones know Constitution Classified Ads can save their time and money.

Be Friendly If You Want Friends

By Caroline Chatfield.

Yesterday we were saying that friendship is a pay-as-you-enter proposition and without the coin we can't ride. In these giddy days when the young folks can scarcely spare time from their run-arounds to snatch eight hours of shut-eye, a girl who can't play a game, shake a foot, swing a racquet or wave a fan needn't expect to keep up with the girls, she's likely to out with the boys. After which the successive stages are weeping, gnashing of teeth, cynicism, bitterness and a pitiful effort to hide defeat by pretending that she's too good for the social game as played.

Then comes another phase in which she realizes she's getting nowhere fast, that youth is slipping by and she might as well be dead. If she's a sensible girl she realizes she must make a place for herself since this is something nobody can do for her and here's where we come in with a load of advice.

Friends? Why they are all around us—that is potential friends, most of them wishing for the same thing we wish for: to be liked. But we have no way of knowing what they want nor they any way of knowing what we want unless we make it plain with a friendly smile and greeting, an agreeable response to conversation directed to us, a complimentary word of thoughtful attention to those we wish to win. But we've got to have a little warmth behind it. Campaigning for friends usually fails if it is a mechanical performance. Solomon's recipe which read "He who would have friends must show himself friendly" has in implied direction to heat well before serving.

In these days when so much stress is laid on salesmanship, when the phone girl at the switchboard is stored in the proper tone for the hello, thank you and good-bye, when every employee in office, store and factory is cautioned to mind her manners, flatter the customer, heap on the compliments, grin like a Cheshire cat to help the business, there's a tendency to carry over this smooth and pretty talk of the business world into our personal contacts and if we're not careful we become mechanical and lose sight of something vastly more important; namely, that what's in our hearts toward people will come out and they will rate us accordingly.

Nothing Like Romance to Stimulate Girl's Interest in Looking Her Best

By Ida Jean Kain.

There is nothing like a romance in a girl's life to stimulate her interest in looking her best... and we are delighted to report that one of our reducers not only carried out her good intentions as to slimming, but she also got her man!

A postcard from her says frankly that "I had been reading about slimming for some time, but I never got around to it until I fell in love. Then I started in! I have taken my weight down from 150 pounds to 132, which is perfect for my height of five feet seven inches. At least, he seems to think so!"

We wouldn't be so rash as to promise such a happy conclusion to every slimming program, but there's no doubt that a girl improves her chances along with her looks, and that a slim figure helps considerably. We know another girl... She was so busy getting her master's degree that she could not bother her pretty head about calories or spare the time for exercise, or so she claimed.

But it so happened that she took a job in a community where there were plenty of eligible bachelors. Then she suddenly did an about face. She decided that it didn't matter if you did know all the dates in history if you couldn't get one of your own, so she took herself in hand—and made her figure over. She did rolling exercises to get rid of a sedentary hipline, twisted and stretched to nip in her waist, and she acquired a lovely posture instead of her round-shouldered, student's stoop.

Also, she abandoned the idea of saving all her money for her old age and bought a few snappy clothes. Now, we hear she has become the belle of the town!

Both of those enterprising young women had an incentive to start with, and it was easy for them to get going on their programs. The majority of you may have to be self-starters. In that case, the surest way to keep up your interest will be to get results—and to get them fast. To deal firmly with the pounds, adjust your calorie intake to the level that will let you lose steadily—the menu printed today is typical of the ones you should follow. To make short work of hip and waist padding, lie on the back on the floor, arms straight out on the floor shoulder level, knees flexed and feet held off the floor; and roll from the hips. Go away over on one side, then on the other, rolling back and forth across the heaviest part of the hipline. Try to keep the back fairly flat on the floor to give your waist the benefit of the twisting that is necessary in order to roll the hips. Later on, give the waist an extra stretch by shooting the legs straight out and down at the side, after you have rolled the hips over.

Note: Without detracting from the protective value of the menu, crisp green salad, can, be substituted for the potato salad and the calorie total lowered by 175 calories.

Bette Likes To 'Suffer' For Her Art

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, July 4.—Bette Davis' lover in "The Letter"—David Newell—went to school with Joan Crawford in Missouri. This is his second chance for film fame. David was brought out here for big things by Paramount in 1929, but, except for bit and extra roles, nothing happened. Now he is loved by Bette Davis and gets shot for his pains in "The Letter." Bette, by the way, couldn't wait to get her hands on the gun and pop away at him. Poor Mr. Newell fell so many times—the scene was taken eight times, five shots a time—that he ended up with a cracked rib. But says he'd crack the other 23 to really make good in Hollywood.

Bette Davis is another who loves to suffer for her art. "The audience may get tired of my suffering, but I love it," says Bette. "I don't want to do comedy," she adds. "I'm not that sort of a girl. I only want to do gutsy-girl roles." She gets killed in this one. "Gail Patrick murders me at the end," says Bette cheerfully. Gail plays the Eurasian wife of Newell.

By the way, Herbert Marshall played the lover role in the first movie version of "The Letter" (Jeanne Eagels was the star). Now Marshall plays Bette's deceived husband. Which is sort of kicking him upstairs!

Dorothy Lamour is going to be chased by a couple of elephants and a 14-foot cobra in "Moon Over Burma." They haven't told her about the cobra yet—it's being saved for surprise effect. I find it hard to recognize Dorothy—for two reasons. Her hair is Hedy Lamarr length and she's dressed from neck to knees. "No sarong in this picture," says Miss Lamour.

"I wear it instead," interrupts Preston Foster. "It won't look as good on you as on Dotty," I tell him—and duck. At this point Miss Lamour has to climb onto the top of an elephant. She's scared to death of elephants, but gets her reward for being a good girl. Who should she find at the end of her climb but Robert Preston, the publicity "man-I-love." Bob looks a little green himself and hangs on for dear life to his part of the howdah. The elephant walks and throws Dorothy into Bob's arms. They smile politely at each other and shift quickly to opposite ends of the elephant.

Woman's Quiz

Q. What is the birthstone for June, and the superstition connected with it?

A. Agate, emerald and pearl are suggested from various sources as the birthstone for June. The American Jewelers' Association suggests pearl, another organization suggests the emerald as the ancient symbol for the month, and the agate as the modern symbol. The emerald is supposed to stand for happiness; the agate for health and wealth, and the pearl for purity, beauty and nobility.

Q. How long was the law in effect that caused American women to lose their citizenship when they married aliens?

A. From March 2, 1907, to September 22, 1922. Women who married aliens on or after September 22, 1922, did not lose their citizenship, unless they married aliens not eligible to citizenship, such as Chinese or Japanese. Women who married aliens not eligible to citizenship after March 3, 1931, no longer lost their citizenship.

Q. How many teeth should a child of six have and what are the names?

A. Each jaw has two six-year molars, two second molars, two first molars, two cuspids, two lateral incisors and two central incisors, a total of 24 teeth.

Q. How does skim milk compare with whole milk in protein content?

A. Although lacking in fat, skim milk contains practically all of the protein, sugar, and mineral matter of the whole milk and is especially useful in cooking or combining with other foods.

MY DAY: Voluntary Gifts Keep Up Refugee Homes

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—It is so rare in this world that anyone wants to take away from any credit given them, and gives it to somebody else, that I must tell you that Mrs. Stephen Wise insists I created a wrong impression after going through houses for refugees the other day. These are run by the American Jewish Congress, and the women's division founded and maintained them entirely through voluntary gifts.

I forgot to mention one rather important fact—that while the management has been entirely in the hands of the women's division of the American Jewish Congress, they have accepted refugees on an entirely non-sectarian basis. Not only Jewish, but Catholic and Liberal Protestant refugees from Germany, have found a haven here.

I did a considerable amount of work yesterday, even though I felt I had spent a very free day. After our luncheon guests departed, Miss Thompson and I sat at our desks until 6 o'clock, when we called on some of the neighbors. Otto Berge, the head man who took over our furniture shop a few years ago and who makes beautiful pieces of furniture in his own barn with the help of the machinery we gave him, has made a lattern for me to send to an Indian church out west. It is made of oak because the rest of the woodwork in the church is oak. As a rule, I do not care much for oak as a decorative wood, but Otto Berge has finished this so beautifully that I was very happy over it. I hope that when it reaches its destination, it will look well in the little church.

I am giving my broadcast today from the big house up here for the first time. It has been wired for the President, so that makes it possible for me to speak from there.

So Rumania has had to join Hitler in order to gain protection, and the islands of Guernsey and Jersey in the English channel, which are demilitarized and half evacuated, now have the swastika flying over them. This should help Hitler from the point of view of dairy products, but then perhaps the children in Germany feel as some of our children did who had been unable to have butter for a long time. A butter substitute seems to become a habit and children prefer it to real butter.

The importance of these islands, of course, is simply that they become another base from which Germany can operate more easily against Southampton, which is an important shipping port.

We have heard so little lately of submarine activity that one feels encouraged to believe that the ships which carry children from Europe will come through safely. The responsibility of the crew and the people who care for the children on this trip must be heavy indeed and one hopes that no submarine will have the heart to attack them.

Take Care of Your Skin During the Hot Weather

By Lillian Mae.

Unless your ground is cultivated and your seed carefully selected and planted, you wouldn't expect to find the prize type of flowers growing in your garden, would you? But what of your skin?

Do you think that you can take just any kind of neglected complexion and, applying the most expensive make-up, have a picture of which you'll be proud? Well, that won't work. First you must cultivate the plot on which your complexion is expected to blossom. And that means careful and regular care. The young complexion just will become an older one, and if it isn't cared for in its youth it won't furnish the proper garden soil for a blossoming complexion in older age.

There are three steps to a lovely skin: proper cleansing, stimulation and lubrication. These phases should be followed the year around. As you change your clothes and your food menus for each new season, so you should look to your cosmetics. One of our very fine cosmeticians and beauty authorities has made a study of the summer complexion and now presents to us a mild skin treatment to keep it at its best.

Her cleansing cream is cool to the feel and does not leave any feeling of oiliness. It can be put on and removed quickly and is perfect for summer cleansing.

Cool and refreshing is the summer skin lotion. Milky white in color, it is not drying and very definitely stimulates when patted on. This is a most important step in skin care.

Then there is the very important business of lubricating, and that is done through the use of a mild new formula cream which guards against drying winds, heat and exposure to the sun. And the grandest thing about this cream is that it doesn't need to be left on overnight. Just the time in which you are taking your bath or dressing is sufficient.

You'll agree with me that these three steps are not hard to follow and you'll find that your garden soil is in proper condition for that blossoming complexion in spite of the weather or climate, if you follow this simple treatment during the summer.

Our friend has boxed the three preparations in a compact package for those who care to purchase that way, or, of course, each may be bought separately, each at only one dollar—and it should take you through the summer.

At such a price for beauty, you can certainly afford to protect your complexion during the hot weather and you'll be thankful many times over for having done so, when the roses really bloom in your cheeks.

Phone me for the names of these products. If you do not live in Atlanta, write me, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Why the Midsummer Interest In Conservation of Teeth?

By Dr. William Brady.

Whether dentists generally are kept particularly busy in the months of July and August—vacation time—I do not know. I do know that in the course of these vacation months, for many years, a greater number of queries concerning two subjects have come from readers than throughout the rest of the year—the subjects of girth control and conservation of the teeth. The sudden interest in the former subject, I have assumed, is due to the fact that the accessions of the past year become so obvious in midsummer dress or lack of it. But I can't explain the midsummer interest in saving the teeth.

In describing the instance of the charming clubwoman who was content to travel the rest of the way minus two molars, because, as she thought, their absence would not show, we used up our space the day before we finished the story.

The woman, you may remember, was 50 and still had vire, or, as ordinarily described, grace and charm. She had always had regular care of her teeth—by her dentist, of course. She had attractive, clean, an's personal appearance.

But while she herself evidently recognized how much well cared for teeth—cared for by regular periodic inspection, treatment, cleaning by the dentist—add to P. A., it was equally apparent that she had no proper conception of the influence of good teeth or bad teeth, one way or the other, upon personal health.

One of the friends of the clubwoman challenged her on this point. She reminded her that the loss of one or two back teeth would inevitably show in the course of time, for the inevitable change in mastication would alter the development and contour of the jaws and face, and the loss of the support of the teeth would permit drooping and hollowing in the cheek which would be difficult or impossible to restore if the vacancy or vacancies were not promptly filled by suitable bridges or other dentures.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

Mother: "My husband and I wish to help Tom learn how to play with other children in every way that we can. We appreciate your interest in him and his chance to play here."

Mother: "The playground director sent me a note asking one of us to come and talk to him. He says Tom is mean to the smaller children. I won't go near such a prejudiced man!"

Taking the attitude that the other person is always to blame does not help the adjustment of one's own child.

Do You Know What Clothes To Take?

By Yolande Gwin.

Seeing double has its good and bad points.

Some of the good points are very useful when shopping for an outing.

No one ever comes home with the same amount of clothes as packed for the trip. True, when packing for the return trip, it is almost next to impossible to get everything in the suitcase, even though you had room to spare when you packed at home. Clothes either expand or they multiply. Nothing ever seems to fit in the right place.

Every wife knows that her husband will stage a dramatic act when he finds he has left the blue golf socks at home, or part of his bathing suit. Or just any other thing.

Always make him take along two bathing suits. That is so-one may be drying, in case he wants to take a dip the second time. Nothing is worse than putting on a wet bathing suit.

Then, in between your play suit and your best sport model, slip one of his favorite shirts. Holiday outings always present the unexpected at the eleventh hour, when Hubby's last clean shirt has done a crumpling act.

When he declines the invitation, you just dash in with your sweetest smile, and say: "Why, of course we can come. Tom was just saying today he hoped he would be able to wear his favorite shirt to a real grand party! And now he will have his chance!"

In the meantime, give him either a jab in the ribs, a wink, or kick him under the table as the case may be.

He will be so pleased that he has another shirt that he will never suspect that you planned the party, in order to wear that new glamour model you charged to him!

And don't forget to make him take an extra pair of shoes. He has to put his best foot forward even at a resort.

Suburbs Show Building Boom For Half Year

327 Permits Issued in Decatur, 54 in College Park.

Building permits issued in suburban communities increased sharply during the first six months of 1940 and bore out the census figures which disclosed a residential trend away from the Atlanta city limits.

Decatur led in the building boom, with Mrs. Mortie H. Christian, city clerk, issuing 327 licenses so far this year as compared to 218 for the same period last year. Valuation of new buildings, however, declined from $572,620 to $472,458.

This was explained by Mrs. Christian in two permits issued the first of last year for the erection of a $28,000 addition to Girls' high school and the construction at the same time of a $70,000 city auditorium.

Decatur saw 116 residences erected through June of this year, as compared to 89 for the corresponding period of 1939. Business house permits fell off from a value of $52,100 last year to $27,075 this year.

George B. Lindsey, clerk of College Park, has issued 54 licenses so far in 1940, as compared to an estimated 40 given last year. The valuation through June has been $117,415, which is much greater than last year's figure, Lindsey said.

In Hapeville 39 permits have been issued, representing 23 new buildings, and valued at $71,065, according to Clerk Elvis Hoppe. Last year 26 permits were issued, at a valuation of $42,695.

DeKalb county's department of buildings, organized last December under Leon O'Neal, has issued since it began work a total of 239 permits, for a valuation of $627,277. The bulk of this construction work, O'Neal said, has been during the past three months.

Hitler Facing Tough Problem Invading Isles

British Seapower Must Be Broken First, Says Palmer.

By COL. FREDERICK PALMER.

For North American Newspaper Alliance. NEW YORK, July 4.—The possibility that Britain may have to fight alone was already envisaged by the British before I left London just after the Flanders disaster as Hitler marshaled his legions for the drive against the French army.

Any suggestion of a compromise peace was met not only with the universal, stubborn "we will never yield," but government circles fully realized that if compromise could be accepted it would not be available. It was fully understood that Hitler's mind was set on the destruction of the British empire as his crowning triumph. For both him and Britain it was all or nothing to the last ditch.

Facing the worst that could happen, Britain at the time I left was preparing against an invasion. But first let us consider the preliminary action which might serve Hitler's purpose in a stranglehold without landing an army, once he is free to concentrate all his power on Britain.

There is no dodging the fact that where, at the outset of the war, Germany had only a little corner of north seas coast between the Dutch and Danish frontiers now she has a triangular unbroken stretch from Narvik to Havre covering the east and southern coasts of Britain for air and submarine bases.

Hitler has not only the English channel ports across from England, but has the Atlantic coasts. He can mount powerful guns at Calais which can shell Dover and Folkestone. Under cover of darkness British merchant ship convoys may be able to escape their fire in passage through the channel, but will be much harassed by it on their way to the vitally important British North sea ports.

Ireland a Menace.
A further foothold than the conquered French Atlantic ports in menacing British trade routes is a possible base in Ireland which lies athwart the north Atlantic crossing to the United States and Canada.

An investigation recently made in the Free State developed some amazing revelations. The Free State appears ripe for a fifth column. The sore bisept De Valera has clamped on a severe censorship. His indignant critics refer to him privately as "the plain's puppet." Unemployed youth are restless on opportunism's bright and shining edge for adventure.

The busy German legation in Dublin has vastly enlarged its peacetime staff. It openly spread no German propaganda but seems to have funds and is not above giving friendly confidential advice. I was in touch with some Free State elements which obviously were more receptive to Nazi influence than British, even though unconsciously. I not only heard talk about the overthrow of the De Valera government but detected signs of how Nazi intrigue might soon start a revolution which would serve to establish submarine bases in Free State ports.

Unloose Air Raids.

Could the Germans defend these ports against British seapower? It is certain that British naval losses are less than new ships put in commission since the war began and building and neutral augmentations have increased the British merchant fleet.

Hitler must break British seapower or force a passage through it before he can land an army in Britain. While his guns are pounding Dover he will unloose all his air power upon Britain. Its effectiveness is in ratio to distance no less than that of other arms. It will be a short flight from his air-dromes across the channel. These he can defend with immense anti-aircraft gun concentrations. It is no concern of his if Belgian and French civilians are killed, but will be for British bombers.

British planes to carry the war to the munition plants of the Rhine valley must fly much farther. From air bases in Norway as well as across the channel, Hitler can bomb the British munition plants in the midlands and elsewhere and naval bases and traffic centers generally. By persistent bombing he will aim to demoralize the civil population diverting energy from war activities. London will be bombed. If he really has banked on an immense reserve of submarines it is in order that he shall loose his undersea blitzkrieg at the same time as his air blitzkrieg, seeking to wear down the British navy and so blockade Britain that she will be gradually cut off from supplies.

Navy Superior.
A part of the British navy will be kept occupied in the Mediterranean by Mussolini. But that in British waters remains superior to the German. Neither by parachute nor by the heralded submarine troop trailers can the Nazis land a sufficient army for a successful invasion of Britain. Hitler must have a secure passage for mobility.

Wild Animals in Circus Scare Aerialist Who Does Death Dive

Jennie Rooney Finds No Thrill in Her Daring Plunge.

NEW YORK, July 4.—(AP)—Brown-haired Jennie Rooney, mother of a 24-year-old son, has discovered how to stay young... she does a "death dive" twice a day at the circus.

Working with her husband, Ed, 40 feet above the arena, she dives toward the audience from a trapeze. She is within four and a half feet of the floor when a strap around her ankle stops her plunge. You have to stay young to do stunts like that. If you don't, you don't do those stunts a second time.

"It's no more thrilling than riding down a fast elevator," she said in a dressing-room interview.

She does the act without a safety net.

Mrs. Rooney is just five feet tall and weighs 112 pounds and doesn't look much older than her son's 24.

She has been with circuses since she was seven, and has done about everything there is to do—bareback riding, balancing acts, trapeze work, high-wire work and tumbling.

"I'm scared when I get within 10 feet of a wild animal," she says. "I begin to shiver and shake, and the animals seem to sense that I'm afraid. I'll never work with wild animals as long as I can do my dive."

"The basis of most circus work," she explains, "is acrobatic tumbling and balance. Once you have a good grounding in fundamentals it doesn't matter much whether you perform in the air, on the ground, or on a horse."

She said she couldn't work without her husband.

"He knows the problems I face, and he knows just how to handle the rope smoothly."

The Rooneys didn't need to be prodded to talk about their son, John. A graduate of Marquette University, he is a dentist at Fond du Lac, Wis.

"He never liked circus life, and we never tried to make him like it," she said. "We encouraged him to do whatever he wanted to do."

She said she and her husband wouldn't be happy anywhere but in a circus. He has been with circuses ever since he was 12: At the time they met, he was bareback riding, but he took up aerial work so as to be with her mother. They have a home at Sarasota, Fla., where they spend five months of the year.

Some people think trapeze artists jump off houses and swing on chandeliers when they aren't appearing with circuses.

Not the Rooneys—they fish and play golf and bridge.

COMING AT YOU!—That's Jennie Rooney, up there near the row of Madison Square Garden lights, starting her "death dive."

lized transports which can carry tanks, guns and ammunition as well as men and be sure of keeping up the overseas line of communications or his army will be cut off.

Maybe he has found a way as another of his surprises. Prophets better walk warily in this war.

Races Rained Out, Set Sunday

Stock W'ners Battle Racers In Main Event

Stock Cars To Receive Half-Mile Handicap in Sunday Feature.

Rain that turned the racing strip at Lakewood park to a river of gumbo mud caused the postponement of the Fourth of July auto races yesterday.

The full program of races will be run Sunday at 3 o'clock. Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern Fair Association, sponsors of the Independence Day festivities, announced.

"The boys were ready to run," said Mike. "There were 40 or more there, with stock cars and race cars all lined up, but the track condition made it too dangerous. We're sorry to disappoint the big crowd which showed up, but their rain checks are good for Sunday just the same."

The program Sunday will consist of four stock car races and four contests between racing machines. The big event of the day will be a special 10-mile race between the first, second and third place winners of the stock car races and the first, second and third-place winners in the race car events.

It's Benton's own idea and one that hasn't been tried yet, but within a few miles per hour of the racing machines, and granted a half-mile lead to boot, it should be a great contest, Benton believes.

The remainder of the Fourth of July program, including the beauty contest and the fireworks, went off as scheduled.

blows. Figure it out for yourself. The answer is not consistency.

Dahlbender may never be consistent. It's hard to get in the 60's and stay there. That type of consistency is tough, indeed. But I do believe there's a day coming—say, in two years—when Gene will catch a string of scores in the 60's that will shove any opposition out of the way.

Some golfers can be consistent, turning in 70's and 71's with an occasional 68 or 73 thrown in.

But name one with the range of Dahlbender. From 88 to 62 in a week or two—that's what that is. From 81 to 71 in four hours.

Consistency is a virtue in tournament golf, all right. It pays off in many cases.

But I'll take the little man named Dahlbender.

He can shoot lower than his opponent no matter what happens. In other words, Gene is capable of any score.

There is no bottom to his scoring range and there isn't any top right now.

There may never be a top.

'But the bottom—well, don't try to surprise me with news that Gene has shot a 58 or 59.

I just happen to think he can do it.

Any man who hits the ball straighter the harder he slams it is capable of doing anything on a golf course.

Harris Collier Lost To Vandy Eleven

NASHVILLE, Tenn., July 4.—(AP)—Harris Collier, junior end at Vanderbilt University's football squad, notified friends here that he had enrolled in the United States army's air school at Randolph Field, Texas, and would not return to school this fall.

Collier is the second player upon whom Coach Red Sanders was counting heavily for next season to cast his lot with the nation's armed forces. Bill Kammerer, first-string blocking back and holder of a reserve officer's commission, recently announced he had applied for active army service.

ARDENT CRACKER FANS—Illness couldn't keep L. E. Hallman from Ponce de Leon Park yesterday. The photographer caught Hallman and the Mrs. watching the Cracker-Nashville contest from the back door of an ambulance. They seem to be enjoying the play.

CRACKERS

In competition with the Vols. Bob Boken collected four of the Vols' hits—all of them in a row after he fanned in the first inning. Anderson got the most Cracker hits, with three for four official trips. He drove in two runs and scored one. Mailho, with two hits, drove in two and scored the winning run.

Tom Hafey, making his debut at first, turned in a brilliant performance.

TWO GAMES TONIGHT.

A double-header is scheduled tonight, starting at 8 o'clock, with Poffenberger, seeking his fifteenth victory, and Lee Rogers pitching for the Vols. Emile Lochbaum and Wayman Kerkiseck will go to the firing line for the Crackers.

Here are the details of yesterday's thrilling opener.

SCORE TWO.

The Crackers had no sooner broken a scoreless deadlock by scoring two runs in the third than the Vols cut loose and tied it up in the fourth.

Hafey led off with a single. Richards grounded to Tatum, whose throw pulled Mailho off second base. The error was most helpful. Drake was out bunting foul on the third strike. Glock grounded to Jeffcoat, who threw him out when Boken failed to cover third base. It was an easy force play. So, with Hafey on third and Richards on second, Anderson doubled off Boken's glove.

If the fans thought Manager Larry Gilbert was taking himself out of yesterday's game and leaving Nashville without a regular catcher, they should have seen President Earl Mann, of the Crackers, afterwards.

Mann, discovering that George had slammed a two-by-four through the umpires' door and had broken the lock on the visitors' dressing room, was fit to be tied.

"I was on the verge of having him arrested for maliciously destroying property," Mann said. "I reconsidered, but I do know one thing—he's going to pay for it."

scoring both runners. Mailho and Hockett and Marshall fled to Dugas.

After Hockett singled, Dugas popped to Anderson and George fled to Mailho. Rocco singled to right and, when Mailho fumbled the ball, Rocco took second and Hockett stopped at third. Boken scored them both with a single. Tatum walked and Jeffcoat was thrown out by Drake.

BASES LOADED.

It looked like the Vols might take the Crackers apart in the fifth, when Mailho was safe on Glock's error. Moser singled over Glock's head and Hockett bunted. The bases were loaded with none out. Then Tom Hafey crushed their hopes with a great double play, who rifled the ball to the plate, forcing Mailho, and Richards fired the ball back to Hafey just in time to retire Dugas. Glock threw out George.

The Vols went into the lead in the sixth, when Rocco, leading off, hit a home run. Boken followed with a single and Drake was relieved by Miller. Tatum walked. But Miller took Jeffcoat's bunt and forced Boken at third. Mailho fanned. Glock made a great play on Moser's grounder to force Jeffcoat at second.

It was a game of action. Marshall led off the sixth with a single. Hockett made a remarkable one-hand catch of Hill's drive over his shoulder. Suydam sent Marshall to third with a sharp single, but the Crackers failed to score when Hafey popped to short right and Richards fled to center.

JEFFCOAT OUT.

The Crackers knocked Jeffcoat out of the box and took the lead in the seventh. Jeffcoat struck out McQuillen, batting for Miller. But he walked Glock and Anderson. Glock made a great play on Moser's grounder to force Jeffcoat at second.

Oliver Beats Slayton, 1 Up, At Thomasville

THOMASVILLE, Ga., July 4.—Johnny Oliver, seasoned campaigner from Valdosta, had to call on all the skill and iron nerve he possessed today to win the Piney Woods golf championship, from young Jack Slayton, of Columbus, in a spectacular 36-hole final match.

Four up at the end of the morning round and six up at one time during the afternoon round, Oliver lost seven out of eight holes to Slayton, followed his lead by winning the final hole, 18, to win the championship, one up on the home green.

In the consolation finals of the championship, W. L. Goodloe Jr., of Valdosta, defeated Ramsey Pickock, of Moultrie, 3 and 2.

With firecrackers popping and voices sounding off at top speed, the Blues team whipped the Reds, 22-17, in Druid Hills' annual Tin Pan Golf tournament yesterday.

Sponsors of each team made much noise as possible while members of the other side were shooting. As a result there were a few missed shots, although no one complained of going much higher than usual in the scoring department.

After the novel tournament, an auction was held. The money made at the tournament will be turned over to the Red Cross.

Deaf Meeting Governor Speaks Today as 15th Georgia Convention Continues.

The Georgia Association of the Deaf, founded in 1910, opened its fifteenth biennial convention last night at the Ansley hotel with a three-day program scheduled that included talks on progress in education for the hard of hearing, dances, a play, a beauty contest and an athletic program.

Opening session last night consisted of registration, followed by a short talk by Herman Talmadge, pinch hitting for his father, former Governor Eugene Talmadge, and a dance.

Ernest Hartford, of Atlanta, chairman of the convention reception committee, presided; Howard Sturgis and James F. Ponder were in charge of registration and Gross Harper, former supervisor of boys at the Georgia School for the Deaf, introduced Talmadge, whose remarks stressing need for equal educational opportunities for the deaf were conveyed to his audience through the fingers of an interpreter.

The program continues today with the first formal session, with Esteban Ward, president of the association, presiding, and Governor Rivers delivering an address at the morning session.

Speakers on the luncheon program will be Morgan Blake, of the Journal; C. H. Holingsworth, superintendent of the Georgia School of the Deaf; Roy Parks, academic principal of the school; H. E. Woodruff, teacher of agriculture; Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools, and L. B. Dickerson, of Atlanta, who will review the association's 30 years of progress.

Members of the association are: Esteban Ward, Atlanta, president; John W. Cail, Savannah, vice president; Herbert Williams, Atlanta, second vice president; Ernest Herron, Atlanta, secretary, and James F. Ponder, Atlanta, treasurer.
